Pennsy's First Billion. 500,000 and 50 to 1. The Core of the Earth. Happy Lung Fish.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WE HAVE a valuable, profitable country, if we could only persuade it to start up and "get going" again. A report of the Pennsylvania Railroad, for instance, shows that the institution managed by Gen. Atterbury has paid during the past year more than forty-two million dollars in dividends, and since its incorporation in 1846, has paid ONE THOUSAND AND THIRTY-ONE MILLION DOLLARS TO STOCKHOLDERS. This is interesting because the Pennsylvania is the first railroad to pass the billion dollar mark in dividend payments.

FIVE HUNDRED thousand yesterday watching the running of the Grand National steeplechase at Aintree, saw Forbra win with 50 to 1 bet against him. That victory will make the foolish dream about "easy money" only to realize later that there is no such thing.

THOSE INTERESTED in horses will note that Forbra is seven years old, old enough to have bones and muscles well developed. The usual system that sets horses to galloping at high speed before they are two years old burns them up quickly. But that is the way to make racing financially profitable.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY, helped by a generous gift of the Rockefeller Foundation, will investigate the "core" of this earth, attempting to reproduce the heat and terrific pressure that exist at that central spot, toward which, as Dante said, long before Newton was born, to formulate the law of gravitation, all things in the universe tend.

THE HARVARD professors possess apparatus which has "squeezed water into five different solid forms, and pressed air into a substance as dense as water."

It is hard to believe that any experiments on the surface could produce conditions created by the pressure of four thousand miles of earth bearing down on the "core." But it is hoped that discoveries will help geologists to locate precious metals.

IT IS KNOWN that the earth is as approximately heavy as though made of solid steel. Imagine the pressure at the lower end of a steel column four thousand miles high.

In the interior of the sun, heat rises to fifty million degrees Centigrade, according to Jeans, impossible for us to conceive. If an ordinary rifle bullet could be raised to that temperature and you came within five thousand miles of it, you would shrivel up and disappear.

AT NEW YORK University, Dr. Homer Smith studies metabolism, with the aid of a fish that has been asleep for three and a half years and is expected to sleep eighteen months longer. The creature is called a "lung fish," because it can breathe through gills in the water and through rudimentary lungs on land, an interesting step in evolution.

Some of the unemployed might wish to possess the fish's versatility. How comfortable to go to sleep, leaving a call for "1933, 1934, 1935 or whenever times get better."

THOSE WITH large incomes that do not like income tax, prepare to shed large tears or find a lawyer that can show you how to avoid doing what you don't want to do.

The House Ways and Means Committee has marked up maximum income surtaxes to 65 per cent by a vote of 153 to 87. If you have an income above $5,000,000 a year you must pay 72 per cent, but that, of course, does not worry a majority of us.

It probably does not worry those with more than five million a year much, because they have lawyers clever enough to take care of such emergencies, and it is always a comfort to know that you can buy securities entirely free from income tax, and keep all your income.

IN BROOKLYN, N. Y., early yesterday morning, three men in an automobile, picking out five solitary citizens, one after the other, beat and maimed them "for fun," the police say. Two of the victims had their legs broken, skulls were fractured, two will probably die. All were knocked down and kicked without provocation, merely because the three men in the car were in search of amusement.

The police say something of the kind happened eight months ago and believe that the three "were operating after a drinking bout."

The five victims probably consider prohibition NOT a success.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT, born in Buffalo, N. Y., 72 years ago, died yesterday at Monte Carlo. This will be sad news for many that during the past 50 years have heard his Irish songs and ballads.

The most popular of all, perhaps, was "My Wild Irish Rose."

ON APRIL 5 the hardy citizens of Finland will resume the use of alcoholic spirits. They have had enough of prohibition.

The government has ordered 875,000 bottles of liquor, including 75,000 bottles of Scotch whisky, 150,000 bottles of French brandy. Because of extreme cold, wines can't come in until summer. Low in alcoholic content, the bottles would burst.

Eight hundred and seventy-five thousand bottles of liquor would not go far in this country under prohibition.

POWERS GOES TO DOOM CALMLY

Note Left With Warden to Be Opened After Death; Shuns Talk From Gallows

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., March 19.—A sealed envelope addressed to "The Warden" and lying today in the strong box of Warden A. C. Scroggins in West Virginia Penitentiary may hold the key to the mysterious life of Harry F. Powers, "Bluebeard," who plunged into eternity from the scaffold here last night.

Tightly sealed and given to the warden on promise not to reveal its contents publicly, the envelope bears the following instructions:

"In case of my death, consider this yours—otherwise please return."

Beneath the inscription is Powers' signature.

WARDEN GIVES PROMISE

Warden Scroggins has given his solemn word. He says he will not open the missive until he must. Powers told him, he said, that if he didn't open it in a few days "someone would come to him and ask about it."

Only two persons know the contents of the mysterious document. Both were close to the doomed "Bluebeard" in his last moments. Both revealed to this correspondent that the envelope contains a confession. Both asked that their names be withheld.

At Clarksburg today it was reported Powers had turned over to Dr. H. H. Haynes, who had advanced Powers money during his fight for life, the real "confession" story. It is supposed to embody admission of the five murders of which he was accused and a declaration that he committed the crimes in broad daylight after lur-

GIRL BANDIT ROBS MAN IN EAST END

Takes Loot While Her Pals Point Guns; Grocer, Thug Shot in Battle on Hill

City-wide search was being made by police today for the bandit trio whose girl leader rifled the pockets of a pedestrian in the East End while her two male accomplices held him at bay with revolvers last night.

The victim, W. A. Beatty, of 6930 Hamilton avenue, was looking into the show window of an automobile agency in Baum boulevard, near Euclid avenue, when two men pressed revolvers against his back and ordered him to throw up his hands. As Beatty complied a young woman, about 20, dark complexioned and smartly dressed, stepped in front of him and said:

"Keep quiet. We want your money."

The girl unbuttoned Beatty's overcoat and searched his pockets, taking $7 and some personal papers. The trio then fled.

The capture of two Negroes following the holdup last night of the grocery of James McCall at 1847 Colwell street, in which McCall and one of the robbers were wounded, was expected to solve many holdups in the Hill district.

McCall, 42, whose back was grazed by the bandit's bullet, was treated at Mercy Hospital. Henry Williams, 21, of 1621 Our way, whom McCall shot through the face, is under police guard in the hospital.

McCall seized a revolver and fired when a man identified as Williams entered his store with the command to hold up his hands. The robber fired in return. Williams was arrested in his home, police reported, after two boys trailed him from the scene of the fight.

A short time later police arrested Eldridge Davis, 21, of 1621 Our way, said to have acted as a look-out in the holdup attempt.

Reconstruction Act Does Not Call for Dumping of Loans by Private Bankers

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Financial Editor, New York American.

A MOMENTOUS AND GRAVE decision was rendered by Congress in creating the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Since conditions dictated its formation, every sincere American will work for successful achievement of its goal:

Restoration of stability and confidence in the nation's financial structure and through it to our industry and commerce.

Hardly has the reconstruction effort gotten under way, however, than the UGLY, SLIMY hand of SELFISHNESS, UNPATRIOTISM, and GREED already threatens the corporation's success.

Remember, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation represents the government's direct entry into the realm of private finance and industry. It is backed by the credit of the United States. This means that every American CITIZEN'S FUNDS have been made available to the tune of BILLIONS of dollars for the corporation's operations.

THEREFORE, EVERY citizen has a deep PERSONAL FINANCIAL STAKE in the RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION. Each of us has become a stockholder in this vast undertaking.

The RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION'S very nature presupposes a great deal of "relief work." Congress granted it power to make emergency loans to worthy agricultural, commercial and industrial enterprises.

But nowhere in the act which created this corporation will it be found that its resources were intended to BAIL OUT bankers simply because the bankers no longer were WILLING to carry loans they previously had advanced.

The act DOES provide for relief to financial INSTITUTIONS in FROZEN condition or to other business concerns in need of temporary financial aid.

The act DOES NOT provide for WHOLESALE DUMPING OF LOANS by PRIVATE BANKERS.

In fact the act does not even mention PRIVATE bankers.

PERHAPS, THE PRIVATE bankers want to plead NECESSITY rather than unwillingness as the excuse for seeking to have the RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION take over their loans?

The greatest danger to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation exists NOT in the enormous demands which have been or may be made upon it.

The MAJOR DANGER exists in the movement, apparently well under way, to have the corporation TAKE OVER IN ENTIRETY LOANS WHICH THE BANKING COMMUNITY IS VERY ANXIOUS TO BE RID OF.

If the banking community is successful in this effort, the entire RECONSTRUCTION program is doomed to failure.

No single enterprise, no matter how great its resources, can successfully cope with the vast problems in the path of recovery.

CO-OPERATION and COURAGE are the essential qualities which will insure an early recovery.

CO-OPERATION and COURAGE on the part of the ENTIRE financial community.

THE RECONSTRUCTION Finance Corporation was created to stem the tide of deflation and cancel the terrors of the depression.

And now, at the very commencement of RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION operations, the banking community—that is, the PRIVATE BANKERS—are reported holding a bludgeon over the RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION. They threaten bankruptcy to some of our major railroad systems UNLESS THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION TAKES OVER IN ENTIRETY

TAKE SAILOR TO KIDNAP SCENE

Johnson Undergoes Further Grilling; Detectives Sent on Idaho Angle

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS
International News Service.

TRENTON, N. J., March 17.—Henry Johnson, sailor and suitor of Betty Gow, nursemaid to the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, was being questioned today at the Lindbergh estate near Hopewell, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey police, declared in his official press bulletin today.

Johnson, in custody since a few days after the baby was abducted, was taken from Jersey City to Hopewell last night for a personal interview with Col. Lindbergh as well as for the purpose of undergoing further interrogation at the hands of the authorities.

SCHWARZKOPF STATEMENT

Schwarzkopf, in his press statement, had this to say concerning Johnson:

"Last night these headquarters made a request on the Newark authorities for Henry Johnson for the purpose of questioning him. It was found that he was in Jersey City at the time and two men were sent to Jersey City to pick him up and bring him down to headquarters.

"Johnson's statements indicate that he had been to Hopewell several times and it is desired to take him over the ground to verify these statements.

"His status has not changed and he is not under arrest by the New Jersey authorities on any charge, but is still being held on the detainer lodged against him by the immigration authorities. When he arrived here last night he was tired and because of the lateness of the hour he was given an oppor-

BOMB DAMAGES 'STRIP' STORE

A bomb explosion broke a plate glass window and damaged the front of the clothing store of Mike Zuk, 1237 Penn avenue, early today.

The second floor sleeping quarters of Zuk, his wife, Bertha, and their children, Christ, 9, and Adolph, 5, were not damaged.

Zuk could give police no explanation of the explosion, and the officers said they believed that the bomb was intended for another establishment. Damage was estimated at $500 by George Spart.

Film Man Says N. Y. Stole Wife's Love

LOS ANGELES, March 19.—(AP.)—Edward Halpering, film director, won a divorce yesterday after he testified his wife's affection was alienated by the joys of New York. He told the court:

"Upon return home from New York last December 23 she told me she had ceased to love me. She said that since she had tasted the joys of the big city, with its parties, theaters, cabarets and country clubs, she couldn't be happy in her present surroundings."

Man Breaks 8 Eggs, Nose on Sled Track

CHARLEROI, Pa., March 19.—Jonathan Pross, 36, Overbrook truck driver, took an unexpected trip down a sled-riding track here today. He furnished amusement for several children but landed in the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital with a broken nose.

Pross was carrying a crate of eggs and stepped on the track. He slid to the bottom with the crate in his lap—and broke only eight eggs and his nose.

Mellon Here to Fete Brother on Birthday

Andrew W. Mellon, newly appointed Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will attend a family party tonight in the Mellon home, Fifth avenue, in celebration of the birthday of Richard B. Mellon, brother of the Amabassador.

The former Secretary of the Treasury arrived in Pittsburgh yesterday and will remain in the city to spend his own birthday next Thursday with his family. He will be 77 years old. Definite plans for the celebration have not been made.

Ambassador Clark On Easter Holiday

MEXICO CITY, March 19.—(AP.)—Ambassador and Mrs. J. Reuben Clark, Jr., accompanied by Dr. Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College, and Mrs. Aydelotte, left last night for Michoacan to visit Lake Chapala and other resort towns and lakes there over the Easter holiday. They will be gone four days.

Arctic Ship Picks Up Letter from Cramer To Mother.

AMSTERDAM, March 19.—(INS.)—A bundle of papers belonging to Parker D. Cramer, American flier who was lost in Arctic seas on an attempted flight from the United States to Copenhagen, was picked up in the vicinity of the Shetland Islands by a Dutch trawler which returned here today.

The papers include Cramer's flying license, a letter to his mother and a description of the machine in which he made the fatal flight last August.

The papers were turned over to the American Consul here.

Cramer was heralded as a "mystery flier" when, after having flown unobserved by the public from Detroit to Greenland, he was discovered there poised for a trans-Atlantic flight. A mechanic, A. Pacquette, was with him.

The fliers continued toward Copenhagen in easy stages, and, after being forced down near the Faroe Islands, took off again to return to Lerwick, on the Shetlands, because of a storm.

Cramer and his aide took off from Lerwick August 9, and since have been missing. Their wrecked plane was found September 16.

Husband and Wife Vie for Alderman

ATLANTA, Ill., March 19.—(AP.)—There'll be an alderman in the Miller family, win or lose. Fred Miller, Republican, has Mrs. Fred Miller, Democrat, as his opponent.

SEARCH MADE FOR COLLECTOR

Paul L. Shaner, 39 of 4802 Interboro avenue, Homestead Park, was being sought by the Missing Persons Bureau today.

Relatives informed police that Shaner, a collector for the Prudential Insurance Company, disappeared Wednesday morning with about $150 in his clothing. Insurance company officials said that he had turned in a much larger sum of money on Tuesday and scoffed at any idea that he might have absconded.

He was last seen by members of his family when he took his sister-in-law, Margery Barnes, to work in Homestead Wednesday morning on his way to the Duquesne office of his employers.

Missing Fur Ship Sighted in Ice Trap

POINT BARROW, Alaska, March 19.—(AP.)—Like a ghost rising up out of the ice of the Arctic Ocean, the fur trading steamship Baychimo, missing for more than three months, was sighted yesterday in floating ice about 10 miles off Point Barrow.

The vessel apparently little damaged, was held in the tightly packed ice, which, because of its roughness, held boarding parties on shore. The ship disappeared with an ice pack south of Point Barrow.

Nicholas Ends First Leg of Auto Race

VICHY, France, March 19.—(AP.)—Prince Nicholas of Rumania, who is driving an American car in a race from Paris to Nice, arrived here last night, accompanied by his wife, the former Mme. Jana Lucia Delet).

The race began at Paris. It is known as the Paris-Nice Criterium.

CHILD'S NURSE FOILS PROWLER

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 19.—(INS.)—What is believed to have been an attempt to duplicate the Lindbergh kidnaping was frustrated today when a nurse was awakened by a man trying to enter the nursery of the home of J. Seward Johnson, in which Johnson's infant son was sleeping. She aroused a caretaker, who fired several shots at the prowler as he fled.

A ladder was found resting against the sill of the nursery window. On the ground nearby was a chisel.

An alarm was sounded. Within an hour a man who said he was George Malden, of New York City, was arrested in a lunchroom in South Plainfield by Chief of Police Cornelius McCarthy and held as a suspect in the case.

Johnson is a member of a firm which manufactures laboratory and hospital specialties.

Oxford Crew Again Loses to Cambridge

PUTNEY-ON-THAMES, England, March 19.—(INS.)—The light blue of Cambridge rowed steadily up the Thames River today to hand the Oxford crew its ninth consecutive defeat in the eighty-fourth running of the historic event.

The Cambridge eight crossed the finish line a full five lengths in the lead.

SURVEY SHOWS TAG 'FIXING' ELIMINATED IN OTHER CITIES

MODEL TRAFFIC ORDINANCE UP MONDAY

Garland to Put Issue Before Council; Kerr Ready to Present Facts to Park

As City Controller James P. Kerr prepared today to ask the legal department for an opinion regarding "fixing" of more than 200,000 traffic tags during 1931, a survey disclosed that the codified traffic ordinance proposed for Pittsburgh has eliminated "fixing" to a great extent in other cities.

Figures compiled by the National Safety Council disclose that model traffic ordinances in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati and other municipalities have reduced the "fixes" to a negligible factor.

ACTION MONDAY

The ordinance, which will be placed in Council Monday by Councilman Robert Garland, embodies a clause whereby supervision over issuing of tags would be in the hands of the Controller. His jurisdiction would prevent such occurrences in the future, it is believed.

Aside from an opinion on "fixing," Kerr will also ask for a report on interest on fines received by city magistrates. Interest is paid by banks on daily balances. Fines are kept in depositories for as long as a month at a time, an audit revealed.

Should conditions warrant, Kerr will present the facts to District Attorney Andrew T. Park for action.

URGES ENFORCEMENT

Asserting that every tag issued should be accounted for, Kerr said:

"I used to receive quite a few tags from individuals, desiring that we intercede for them. I threw all the tags in the waste basket."

Regarding forfeits retained by magistrates, the Controller declared:

"These forfeits belong to the city unless the cases are properly disposed of by the magistrates. I suggested to Mayor Kline that there be a checkup on the forfeit question by sending for persons posting forfeits, since the Controller's office has no facilities for such investigations. He thought it a good idea."

Kerr did not say whether anything had been done in the matter.

COUPLE NOT LINKED

Meanwhile, Hopewell police questioned Mr. and Mrs. Paul Engstenburg, the former employes of Mrs. Leandro C. Lightfoot, Franklin Park, N. J., who voluntarily accompanied troopers who found them in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Lightfoot had told police her suspicions were aroused, when the couple, whom she identified as Paul and Kate Thornburg, left suddenly the day after the kidnaping.

Schwarzkopf, after examination of the couple, declared the Engstenburgs satisfactorily explained their movements just prior to and since the kidnaping, and that "we have nothing at this time that in any way tends to connect them with the kidnaping."

DETECTIVES GO WEST

Meanwhile, two Newark detectives left to check-up on the story of Ignace Blaustein, a prisoner at Pocatello, Idaho, who "confessed" he was the driver of the car in which the 20-months-old child was spirited away.

Blaustein had said also he knew the address in Newark where the baby was being held. Newark police reported the address supplied them was "vague" and investigation established nothing of value.

Schwarzkopf was asked about a report that three Federal men were en route to Great Falls, Mont., where three men and a woman were reported sought in connection with the kidnaping. He replied:

"We have no information concerning Federal men leaving for Great Falls, Mont."

"CONFESSION" CHECKED

POCATELLO, Ida., March 19.—(INS.)—New details of Ignace Blaustein's "confession" that he participated in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping were being closely checked by authorities today.

The renewed investigation was prompted by Blaustein's reiteration of his original story that he was the driver of the automobile in which Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was whisked away from his Hopewell, N. J., home March 1.

Blaustein, a confessed fraternity house burglar, reaffirmed his story of the kidnaping last night a few hours after he had repudiated it.

In his latest statement the 20-year-old burglar declared that he first entered the plot to kidnap the Lindbergh baby in a restaurant in New York City, known as Roth's Grill. There, according to Blaustein, his services were enlisted by two men whom he named as Eddie Williams and Chick Clark.

After agreeing to join Williams and Clark, Blaustein said he stole an automobile in New Jersey. In this car, according to Blaustein's story, the three men, with Blaustein at the wheel, drove to the Lindbergh estate near Hopewell and stole the baby.

Blaustein said the Lindbergh infant was taken to an apartment in Newark, where he was placed in the care of a "blonde woman." After delivering the baby to the Newark apartment, Blaustein said, he began driving across the country, accompanied by Williams and Clark and a woman called Peggy Hart.

Blaustein said he met Miss Hart in Norfolk, Va. He said she once visited him in the jail here, following his arrest, and that he advised her to leave the state.

Williams and Clark, according to the prisoner's story, are within 200 miles of Pocatello, but a widespread search by police throughout Idaho failed to locate them.

SURRENDERS IN KLINE FIX CASE

Lee Norris, Pittsburgher, the last of the eight indicted by a Butler County grand jury in the probe of the alleged jury "fixing" plot in the trial of Mayor Charles H. Kline surrendered and posted $1,000 bond last night.

Norris was the only one of the eight defendants indicted following the probe who had not been apprehended. The trials are listed for May 2.

Pinchot to Stump For Butler, Flinn

HARRISBURG, March 19.—Gov. Pinchot will make a three-week campaign tour of Pennsylvania in behalf of the candidacies of Gen. Smedley D. Butler and Ralph E. Flinn, respective candidates for the Republican nominations for United States Senator and Auditor General.

The Governor will tour the state with these candidates and the vehicle will be the familiar loud speaker-equipped car used by him in his 1930 gubernatorial campaign.

Olcott's Body Sails For Home Tuesday

MONTE CARLO, March 19.—(INS.)—Preparations were being made today to send the body of Chauncey Olcott to his native New York State for burial. His widow and his son were to accompany the casket aboard the liner Biancamano, sailing Tuesday.

Hundreds of messages poured into the Olcott villa here, mourning the sudden death of the famous American singer of Irish ballads, who was stricken with pernicious anemia.

PLAINS, Mont., March 19.—(AP.)—The engineer and fireman on Northern Pacific passenger train No. 1, west-bound, were killed in a derailment last night near Eddy, Mont. A massive rock, hurtling down a mountainside was believed to have caused the derailment.

Attack on Monopolies Renewed by Father Cox

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 19.—The Rev. James R. Cox, Pittsburgh, continued his attacks on monopolies last night, pleading with audiences at Monessen and Bellevernon to patronize their home merchants.

Mayor Carl Woodward presided at the Monessen meeting held in the high school auditorium. Father Cox appeared there under the auspices of Home Service Stores and other independent groups.

Burgess George Langer, of Bellevernon, and Burgess R. M. McKean, of North Bellevernon, welcomed Father Cox there. He spoke under the auspices of the Italian Beneficiary Society and the Sons of Italy Lodge 663 at Italian Hall, with Charles L. Meinzer presiding. Father D. M. Murphy, of St. Sebastian Church, also spoke.

At both places Father Cox declared it was the duty of Congress to approve a prosperity bond issue of five billions to relieve unemployment.

Father Cox praised the Pittsburgh newspapers, declaring that they have championed the rights and privileges of the people and seek to further that which is for community welfare and progress.

He also spoke in some detail on Ireland and her history and statesmanship.

HURLEY DENIES DRY 'REMARKS'

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—Secretary of War Hurley last night moved to disavow remarks attributed to him in Chicago Thursday to the effect that a more liberal attitude would be taken by the Republican party towards prohibition in its June national convention. The Secretary issued this statement:

"When I want to speak in quotations the words will be mine and not what someone else supposes I have said. I did not mention prohibition in my address in Chicago, nor did I mention it anywhere else for publication."

Hurley was quoted as having made the prohibition remarks in an interview while in the Illinois city to address a St. Patrick's Day celebration.

HIGHER ESTATE AND GIFT TAX PROPOSED

House Progressives Ignore Warnings of Business Harm in War-Time Rates

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Another drive to place the country's tax burden on the rich was launched in the House today by the bi-partisan "progressive bloc" with proposals to levy new high gift and inheritance taxes.

Enthused by their success in bowling over Democratic and Republican leaders yesterday, the bloc's spokesmen declared they would rewrite the $1,100,000,000 tax bill from beginning to end.

With war-time surtax rates voted on incomes, proposals were to be made to establish the same rates on inheritances. The Progressives proposed to take 65 per cent of all estates over $5,000,000 for the government.

WARNINGS IGNORED

Determined to knock out the $595,000,000 manufacturers' sales tax provision, the "Progressive bloc" brushed aside all warnings of leaders that war-time rates would produce little income and might retard business recovery.

A somewhat more sober mood was expected in the turbulent House by leaders who, however, were doubtful whether they could regain control of the situation.

Representative Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, Democratic leader, renewed his declaration that the House must take the sales tax or vote the obnoxious war-time levies on automobiles, gasoline, bank checks and similar sources of revenue.

SALES TAX ARGUED

The sales tax question was threshed out at a Republican conference last night, but no action was taken. Conflicting predictions were made. Representative Campbell (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, said:

"The sales tax will be approved."

Republican leader Snell, of New York, declared:

"The committee voted the sales tax as the most equitable in an emergency. Even the substitutes proposed by the anti-sales tax people have sales taxes in them. The substitute of Representative LaGuardia proposes $138,000,000 of straight retail sales taxes, the worst kind."

Rainey said:

"If they strike the sales tax out of the bill we'll have to bring in a bill putting the war-time taxes in effect all along the line."

LaGuardia, as leader of the bi-partisan "progressive bloc," was confident the sales tax would be defeated.

Suicide Note Found On Bridge Only Joke

The farewell note leaving his love to his family and his worldly goods to a friend, was described as a hoax by John Spade, whose signature was affixed to it when he appeared in Central Police Station early today.

A cap and coat in the pocket in which the note was found was picked up last night in the Seventh Street Bridge. The articles were claimed later by Tony Brisko, a clerk in a cigar store at 311 Wylie avenue. Spade, appearing at the police station, said the affair was a joke.

W. R. Hearst Replies to Two Brooklyn Eagle Questions

Publisher Defends Garner's Failure to Vote on Prohibition; Asserts Hoover Is Still a 'Democrat'

(The following is reprinted from the Brooklyn Eagle, of March 18.)

NEW YORK, March 18.—William Randolph Hearst, publisher credited with discovering Speaker John N. Garner, who is being boosted in the Hearst papers for the presidential nomination, today answered two questions for the Eagle.

Here are the questions:

1. What is your opinion of Speaker Garner's failure to direct his name to be called and to vote on the prohibition referendum resolution?

2. Do you think it is possible for a Democrat to be elected President this year?

Here are Mr. Hearst's answers:

1. The speaker of the House, as you know, ordinarily does not vote.

Of course he can, if he wishes, relinquish his gavel and vote on the floor of the House as a member of the House, but this is an unusual performance.

Perhaps the speaker did not think the situation demanded such unusual action.

Perhaps he did not want to be classified either as a dry or a wet, and those are the only classifications the recent vote in Congress permitted.

Personally I think the classification of citizens as either drys or wets omits an actual majority of our people who should be classed as moderates, because they are neither bonehead drys nor saloonatics.

I would not wish myself to be classified as either a dry or a wet.

I have been a strong advocate of temperance all my life, but I do not consider prohibition a successful temperance measure.

As a matter of fact, according to my observation, prohibition promotes intemperance, and the country as a whole today is not by any means as temperate as it was 12 years ago.

Of course I cannot speak for Mr. Garner, nor can any one else; but I can understand how any one who is a moderate would not want to be classed as an absolute wet or an absolute dry.

2. You ask me if it is possible for a Democrat to be elected this year.

Let me answer that I do not think it is possible for a Republican to be elected this year.

In the first place, no Republican will be nominated.

When Mr. Hoover came back to America, having spent the better part of his life abroad, he did not know whether he was a Democrat or a Republican.

He cast his lot with the Democrats, and became a Wilson internationalist.

He has never changed his policies, but he has changed his party name.

When the Democrats went out of power, and it was apparent that only a Republican could be elected to office, Mr. Hoover called himself a Republican and was elected to office.

But Mr. Hoover is still a Wilson internationalist, and always will be.

He has tried to fasten the Wilson policies of internationalism upon the Republican party, which had pledged itself to oppose these policies.

Mr. Hoover will probably be renominated by the Republican party. That party does not seem to think that it is worth while to nominate a genuine Republican.

I do not believe that Mr. Hoover will be re-elected; but if he is, his election will not be a victory for Republican principles, but merely a victory for the international bankers, and for the foreign entanglements which Washington enjoined us to avoid, and which the Republican party in three national platforms has pledged itself to oppose.

JURY COMPLETE IN MINE KILLING

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 19.—Opening the trial of a mine superintendent and eight mine guards for the slaying of Mike Philipovich, Arnold City storekeeper, during a mine strike riot last June, District Attorney W. K. Newell asked for a first-degree verdict this morning. In a half-hour address he cleared the way for the presentation of testimony.

Three days had been spent in selecting a jury after 109 persons had been examined. Four were selected late yesterday to complete the jury, composed of two women and 10 men. Before the jury was completed the defense had used all of its peremptory challenges and the state had one left.

SULLIVAN PLANS TO FIGHT BAN

Patrick J. Sullivan, the carpenter, of 6244 Station street, said today he had not abandoned his plans to run for Congress against Patrick J. Sullivan, the incumbent, in the Thirty-second District.

Dauphin County Court yesterday ruled that Patrick, the carpenter, could not have his name on the April primaries ballots, holding his candidacy was designed to confuse the supporters of Patrick, the politician, through the similarity of names.

This morning, however, Patrick, the carpenter, said:

"I haven't given up the fight. I'm going to see my attorney today. I'm sick and can't go to his office, so he's coming out here. If there's any possible way, my name will go before the voters."

Old Silver Coins Back in Circulation

EASTON, Pa., March 19.—(AP.)—Money a century old came to light yesterday when a man made a purchase at a local store, proffering silver coins apparently unused for many years. He gave the dealer half dollars dated 1832, 1836, 1854, 1858, 1872, 1875, 1876, 1877 and two Columbian half dollars of 1893 coinage.

RAIL FINANCE AID PROVIDED, HOOVER SAYS

President Declares Roads' Needs Over-Estimated; Co-Ordinated Plan Formed

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP.)—President Hoover in a formal statement today reported the financial necessities of the nation's important rail carriers were less than at first thought, and that a co-ordinated plan of relief had been formed.

The President estimated the aid required in meeting the interest and renewal of railway securities, together with their other obligations during 1932, would range from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000.

Estimating that as much as $60,000,000 might be provided by the Railway Credit Corporation, the President said:

"Recourse to the Reconstruction Corporation by the railroads will be much less than was originally thought."

Commenting upon the series of railway conferences, climaxed by one at the White House late yesterday with 15 outstanding railway chiefs, Mr. Hoover said "the co-ordination of programs and policies has been arrived at by the government and the railway agencies to effect" a meeting of the situation.

Dawes, Meyer Declared At Odds on Loan Policy

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—A controversy between Gen. Charles G. Dawes, president, and Eugene Meyer, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as to restrictions on loans to railroads, brought 15 of the country's leading rail executives to the White House late yesterday.

President Hoover, in conference with the executives, and with Dawes and Meyer present most of the time, undertook to iron out the differences. The series of conferences lasted most of the day and had been discussed earlier by the President and his cabinet.

When adjournment was taken late in the day, a brief White House statement was the only indication of what, if anything, had been accomplished. This appeared to show the conferences will be continued.

MOVE TO AID BANKS

From reliable authority it was learned that the existing impasse between the railroads and the finance corporation is due to the insistence of a dominant executive that the loans granted be used to take up existing loans in the banks, in order that the banks involved may become more liquid.

Gen. Dawes, on the other hand, an equally prominent executive in the corporation, is understood to take the position that the banks be asked to extend the loans, that the money now advanced be used to pay dividends and finance necessary improvements.

The entire controversy within the Reconstruction Finance Corporation came to a head over an $11,700,000 loan to the Missouri Pacific Railroad. This loan, which was granted by J. P. Morgan & Co., falls due on April 1.

Early in February the Missouri Pacific asked permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to apply to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan of $23,250,000, inclusive of the loan due Morgan & Co. After allowing two small loans to the road, the commerce commission proposed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation furnish half the $11,700,000 and the bankers carry the remainder.

MORGAN FIRM DISSENTS

William Meyer, treasurer of the Missouri Pacific, informed the commerce commission in a letter:

"J. P. Morgan & Co., the bankers who hold these notes, have indicated that they are unwilling to agree to such a proposition and believe that these notes should be paid on April 1, 1932."

This was over a fortnight ago. Nothing official has since been revealed as to the maturity which faces the road within the next two weeks.

It was revealed after the conference that 41 railroads have asked for loans totaling $301,000,000 and that the Interstate Commerce Commission has approved to date only 15 loans, with a total of $54,000,000.

Reconstruction Act Does Not Call for Dumping of Loans by Private Bankers

THE BANKERS' OWN LOANS TO THE RAILROADS.

Or is the bankers' threat merely a GREAT BLUFF?

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is at the very crossroads of its career.

One path leads to a reasonable, amicable, cooperative campaign participated in JOINTLY by the government enterprise and the banking community.

The other leads to a complete surrender by the RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION to the bankers. The latter means that the government—that is, every American citizen—will be loaded with the bankers' worthless loans.

MRS. POWERS ILL, HIDES IN DARKNESS AS HUSBAND HANGS

DEATH SILENCE CLOAKS HOME OF WIDOW

Excitement Over 5 Slayings Subsides as Noose Ends Life of Mail Order Romeo

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., March 19.—The extreme penalty paid by the West Virginia "Bluebeard," Harry F. Powers, the city today was relaxed from the tension of excitement which had gripped it for seven months since the bodies of two intended "mail order" brides and the three children of one were found in the hamlet of Quiet Dell.

Mrs. Luella Strother Powers, the widow, who herself was courted by mail, and her sister, Eva Belle Strother, were hidden in the seclusion of their home in the Broad Oak district.

Mrs. Powers was reported by her sister to be ill. No statement was forthcoming from them.

WILL HELD USELESS

Nor was there any statement from Attorney J. Ed Law, who had defended Powers and had sought, through a second appeal to Gov. William G. Conley, to stay the execution at the last minute. Questioned as to the will Powers was reported to have written in his death cell, Law declared he was not aware of its existence. He said:

"The man had nothing, so what could he will?"

He likewise denied having any knowledge of a son of Powers.

Miss Strother was willing to discuss anything except her sister or Powers. She was silent to all questions as she busied herself about the little grocery store the two sisters operate next to their home.

DEATH HOUR SILENCE

As the trap was sprung last night in the Moundsville Penitentiary, the home and store were in darkness, the stillness holding secret the emotions of the two women at the crucial hour.

But a few hours before the man who had carried on his correspondence with his victims from this same dwelling paid for the killings with his life, the store was open for business.

The windowless garage at Quiet Dell, where once thousands of curious persons paid to see the death scene, today was practically forgotten. It has been all but reduced to wreckage by souvenir seekers.

DESERVED FATE, FATHER SAYS

FREDERICKSBURG, Iowa, March 19.—(AP.)—Wilko Drenth, aged father of Harm Drenth, who as Harry F. Powers was hanged last night, showed no sorrow over his son's fate before the hanging yesterday, saying:

"He is getting just what's coming to him."

Drenth speaks no English, but communicated his opinion through an interpreter, Ernest Schroeder, Powers' brother-in-law. He declared:

"If he did those things, he should be hanged.

"I haven't heard a word from him until he got into this trouble. In fact, I haven't seen him nor heard from him for 16 years. My last meeting with him was in Crookston, Minn. He was a hard boy to handle, although he was bright in school."

Hanged for Killing Over Load of Hay

CANON CITY, Col., March 19.—(AP.)—E. J. Farmer, Moffat County, Colorado, rancher, died on the gallows at the state penitentiary here last night. The farmer was convicted of slaying two fellow ranchers January 8, 1931, in a quarrel over a load of hay.

Accused of Slaying Wife for Insurance

ERIE, Pa., March 19.—(AP.)—Insurance policies totaling $7,500, made out to Mrs. Ninetta Sampieri, 40, and naming her husband, Antonio, who is held for her murder, as beneficiary, were found in the Sampieri home last night.

Police charge Sampieri beat his wife to death to collect her insurance. Representatives of four companies which issued the policies said an investigation of the death would be made by them. A brother of the accused man, says four policies are still missing.

Two Hill Men Held In Furniture Theft

Peter Golden, 36, a furniture dealer of 1417 Fifth avenue, and Grandison Stinson, 44, a Negro, of 2233 Center avenue, were arrested yesterday by city detectives in connection with the theft Thursday of fixtures from a restaurant at 948 Liberty avenue.

Stinson was alleged to have removed the fixtures from the restaurant, which had been closed for several weeks, and sold them to Golden. Stinson was held on a suspicious person charge and Golden was charged with receiving stolen goods.

WARDEN A. C. SCROGGINS GIVING PRE-HANGING INSTRUCTIONS TO THE WITNESSES

Powers' Last Plea

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., March 19.—In a last statement given out by Harry Powers before his execution, the West Virginia "Bluebeard," slayer of two women and three children, made a plea against capital punishment. The statement follows:

"Down deep in the consciousness of every person throughout the state of West Virginia in general, and in Harrison County in particular, rests a deep-seated conviction that I have not received a fair and impartial trial; that justice has been denied me in Harrison County.

"Every one there knows that antagonism was to such an extent that a square trial was impossible. Even those who testified that no prejudisiic feelings had or did exist know that their testimony was not based upon facts. This conviction, which is felt way down deep by every fair-minded person, will grow with the passing of time.

"Hate and aniagonism will subside, but the true facts will prevail and cause everyone to realize the deep disgrace that has been placed upon the good name of Harrison County—especially so if my present conviction is permitted to stand.

"EVERLASTING DISGRACE"

"This disgrace will be everlasting and noted throughout the country. Certain people will be looked upon like so many monsters, with veins full of ice water, a heart unmoved by the spectacle of suffering, and with an inordinate appetite for the bloody sacrifices of a human victim.

"Those who have caused to bring about my conviction under existing circumstances and in an unfair manner, either directly or indirectly, stand guilty in the sight of God of attempt to murder, and if I am executed under this conviction then they are guilty of nothing less than murder, for which they must answer at the bar of justice which no one escapes.

"Among this group are those who are responsible for the publishing of many falsehoods as they were published. They have contributed largely in creating that antagonistic public sentiment which to a great degree has been responsible in creating such circumstances as to make true justice impossible.

SCORES MOB STORY

"Could the description of that mob of 5,000 persons who gathered about Harrison County Jail the night of September 19, given by these in affidavits as just a 'curious' crowd reminding them of a 'carnival' crowd, be sincere when they knew that many tear gas bombs and gun shots were necessary to prevent them from storming the jail? Does a 'curious' crowd at a 'carnival' usually act in such lawless manner? Human beings may be decided, but God is able to read the hearts of the men, and they will be held responsible.

"Then the very surroundings where my trial was held—a place where the public had been accustomed for years to go in quest of amusement. I wonder, could such surroundings be changed overnight, with a mere declaration, to render it safe in assuming that a proper dignity would prevail as should prevail in a court of justice, especially so when a human life is at stake? It all must seem very unfair to any reasonable mind.

FIGHTS DEATH PENALTY

"I am pleading with every one—not only in the State of West Virginia, but everywhere—to do everything possible in abolishing capital punishment. The Good Book teaches us that God alone has the right to take a human life. How much better it would be if society itself would set the example by outlawing the murders now committed under the excuse of law.

"Capital punishment is no deterrent to murder. There are more murders committed in the State of West Virginia than in the State of Wisconsin. And under no circumstances should capital punishment be permitted. It is a disgrace to any state that practices it.

POWERS CALM ON GALLOWS

ing his victims to his horror chamber.

CALM ON GALLOWS

Powers has gone into the great beyond—his life the toll demanded by the sovereign state of West Virginia for the lives of two women and three children laid to the door of his Quiet Dell slaughter house garage. Convicted for the murder of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Northboro, Mass., divorcee, he also stood indicted for the murder of Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and her three children, of Park Ridge, Ill.

Although he went calmly to his death, Powers was found sobbing and trembling on his cot an hour earlier. The prison physician said later he found Powers' pulse at 120.

The mail order Lothario died as he lived—by the rope. He faced death as he probably faced it as the dealer several times before. His face was set—grim and determined. His owlish eyes blinked in the stark nakedness of the brightly-lighted execution chamber.

As the curtains across the gallows were pulled back on the final act of the drama of Powers' "love that kills," the pudgy little "Bluebeard" held the center of the stage. He was trussed up in clothes of Oxford gray and lighter gray pin stripe.

He looked down on the vast assemblage of witnesses.

Nine uniformed guards ringed the trussed-up "Romeo," his feet planted firmly on the door to death.

NOTHING TO SAY

Warden A. C. Scroggins, bald pate shining in the bright lights, stepped forward. He addressed the condemned man:

"Harry Powers, is there anything you care to say?"

The prison clock started tolling the hour of 9.

On the second stroke Powers, his face turning to the witnesses below, shook his head slowly left to right and uttered one word:

"No."

A guard stepped forward with a black hood. Placing it over the "Mail-Order Romeo's" head, Deputy Warden Brill lifted the heavy rope noose and adjusted it around the condemned man's neck. As they stepped back, the Rev. Earle M. Giesey, chaplain, slowly intoned:

"Merciful Heavenly Father, creator of life and the soul of man—into Thy care and keeping we commit the soul of Harry Powers. Thou art his supreme judge. Care for his wife. Pardon his sins, we beseech Thee, and take him to Thyself in Jesus' name. Amen."

There was no hymn singing—no more prayer. It was Powers' last request.

TRAP SPRUNG

Warden Scroggins' fingers closed over the signal buzzer. It sputtered the Bluebeard's end.

At the signal, three guards in the rear jerked home three trigger bars. The trapdoor dropped with a bang.

Bluebeard dropped. The rope cracked.

Powers' feet were visible to the front row of spectators beneath. The crowd surged forward. A breathless minute ensued. Then the Warden, speaking from the gallows, announced:

"Gentlemen, we have agreed that there was not a tremor."

Deputy Warden C. E. Brill broke in excitedly.

"Did you see any down there?"

Several of the crowd replied in unison:

"No."

WISHES GUARDS LUCK

The minutes dragged. Five physicians poked and prodded with their stethoscopes. The Warden broke the silence with another announcement:

"Gentlemen, before the curtains parted, Harry Powers walked to the gallows unassisted. He shook hands with all the guards, the deputy warden and myself and wished us luck."

The minutes dragged by interminably.

Finally the doctors announced their findings:

"Harry Powers is dead. The official time is 11 minutes."

The crowd shuffled into the cell room. Physicians and a group of guards remained in the execution chamber to remove the body to the prison morgue.

Warden Scroggins, after the execution, announced that Powers will be buried in the penitentiary plot at Toms Run, about three miles from here. The burial place is the choice of Powers, the Warden declared.

There will be no autopsy.

Cigaret Smokers Opposed as Teachers

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 19.—Opposition to employment of teachers who smoke cigarets was voiced by the school directors of Venango County in convention. The convention also opposed employment of married women as instructors. Prof. L. H. Peffer, county superintendent, warned against cutting salaries of able and efficient teachers or replacing good teachers with ones less experienced because of desire to save in salaries.

North Side Thieves Get Office Machines

Jimmying the rear door into the offices of the A. T. Schomaker & Sons firm, 1118 Irwin avenue, during the night, thieves carried off a large bookkeeping machine and a typewriter valued at $700, according to a report to police.

BALK PREMIER AT BRIDGE FETE

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 19. (INS.)—The New Guard, Australia's "Ku Klux Klan," succeeded in preventing Premier J. T. Lang from opening the great new Sydney harbor bridge today, carrying out its threat despite the greatest precaution on the part of the government.

Just as the premier was about to cut the ribbon across the bridge roadway and officially declare the new $30,000,000 structure open, a prominent New Guardsman dashed into the crowd on horseback, rode up to the ribbon, and cut it with his sword.

A sensational demonstration followed in which spectators at first tried to prevent government officers from arresting the horseman. He finally was seized, however, and charged with "offensive behavior." He gave his name as Capt. De Groot, formerly of the British Fifteenth Hussars. De Groot had shouted:

"I declare the bridge open in the name of New South Wales and in the name of common decency and decent politics."

The New Guard denied it had intended to throw the premier in the river as London reported yesterday, maintaining its aim was solely to prevent Lang from opening the bridge.

Culver Scholarship Competition Today

Eighteen Pittsburgh boys were among a class of 434 candidates from the state who were to take part in the Culver Military Academy scholarship competition in the Frick Training School today. The scholarship is valued at $6,000 and covers all students' expenses for a period of three years. The committee which will choose the winner is composed of Dr. Francis B. Haas, president of the Bloomsburg State Teachers' College; Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools, and Dr. Francis M. Garver, University of Pittsburgh.

Accused of Cutting Tarentum Woman

A man who said he was John Hornesy, 55, and who gave several addresses, was being held by South Side police today as a suspect in the cutting of Mrs. John Winchock, 415 West Tenth avenue, Tarentum, yesterday.

Hornesy was arrested at South Thirteenth and Sarah streets last night with a butcher knife in one hand and a piece of slag in the other, according to police, who said the prisoner's description tallies with that of Mrs. Winchuck's assailant.

COUNTY RELIEF LOAN HOPES REVIVED

Welfare Leaders Still See Chance for $10,000,000 Public Works Proposal

That a possibility still exists of County Commissioners putting a large bond issue before the voters at a special election is contended by leaders of the Allegheny County Emergency Association.

Although Commissioners W. D. Mansfield and C. M. Barr favored state legislation rather than county aid at the recent hearing on the proposed $10,000,000 bond issue, they did not definitely close the door to a large county work program, it is pointed out.

AID PROMISED

The attitude of the Commissioners has been sympathetic. Though they did not grant the request to put the bond issue on the ballots, they did vote to confer with Commissioner Charles C. McGovern and render every assistance which the facts warrant.

The $500,000 city emergency appropriation in the meantime awaits the word of Mayor Charles H. Kline and the vote of City Council. It is understood that the Mayor will announce his decision Monday.

The way in which relief needs multiplied, even in 1931, was indicated in the annual report of the Family Welfare Association made yesterday at their meeting at the Fulton Building. There were 40,525 families cared for in 1931, compared with 13,090 families in 1930.

BURDEN INCREASING

The Family Welfare Association in 1931 spent $568,042 of their own funds compared with $285,629 in 1930. Thus far in 1932, their budget has been considerably exceeded due to the increasing relief burden.

G. G. Coolidge resigned as president of the Family Welfare Association and Frank C. Irish was elected in his stead. He had served as president for nine years.

Members elected to the Board of Directors were R. G. Bostwick, Watson McKee, J. Porter Gillespie, Joseph Dilworth, Charles M. Hanna, George S. Oliver, Mrs. Enoch Rauh, Mrs. Chester Marsh Van Kleeck, William A. Wilson, W. B. Trainor, H. H. McClintic, Jr., and T. Howe Nimick.

102 PICKETERS AT MINE SEIZED

SCRANTON, Pa., March 19.—(AP.)—One hundred and two men doing picket duty in the unauthorized strike of mine workers here, were arrested today by city police when they failed to obey commands to go to their homes.

The arrests were made at the Marvine mine of the Hudson Coal Company, where several hundred strikers went on picket duty in violation of a police order issued last night against all forms of picketing.

Police authorities prepared for drastic moves against the pickets as the result of disorders yesterday and no picketing will be permitted at mines that are operating.

Boone, Ex-Lawyer And Writer Dies

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., March 19.—(AP.)—Henry Burnham Boone, 59, author and retired lawyer, died yesterday.

He was co-author with Kennett Brown of "Eastover Court House," and "The Redfields Succession," and had written independently "Career Triumphant," and many short stories. He practiced law in several states before retiring several years ago.

SEEK CITY LOAN FOR 'TRIANGLE' FLOOD WALL

Business Men See Increase Of Shipping, End of Water Peril With Better Wharves

Downtown business interests will seek the use of city bond issues for the construction of a flood wall around the "golden triangle" with the aim of not only reducing the menace of high waters but improving the city's river terminal facilities.

Action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in establishing joint river and rail transportation rates is expected to considerably increase river traffic here. With better facilities for handling freight, it is believed a considerable tonnage of freight destined for the southwest would be routed through Pittsburgh.

The plan calls for a wall from Smithfield street around the Point to Tenth street.

Charles M. Reppert, chief city engineer, places the cost at more than $20,000,000. Estimates of the Flood Commission are considerably less.

The Flood Commission's plan would add about 18 acres to the downtown area.

An objection to the flood wall plan has been voiced by John P. Casey, Sr., of the Allegheny County Emergency Association, who says the improvement will not require many men.

Should the new decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission quicken trade considerably, it is understood that the barge lines may have some new proposal to make to Council in relation to the city's river freight terminal project. The new river-rail rates will not be in effect for 30 days.

DANGEROUS PARK DEER KILLED

Pals Lonely as 'Bucky' Pays Penalty

"Bucky," one of the three South Park deer raised on a bottle, has been butchered because of his obstreperousness, and today his pals, "Quintillus" and "Lindy," wander alone while guests of the McKeesport Helping Hand enjoy a venison dinner.

The three animals were more or less apart from the other deer in the herd of 75 at the park because of their early feeding methods, and they have been regarded as pets.

Director Paul B. Riis, of the Bureau of Parks, said the three "pets" were even more dangerous than the wild deer because the latter will run at the approach of strangers but the "tame" ones stand their ground and at times attack would-be petters.

"Quintillus" and "Lindy" are still manageable, Director Riis said, but "Bucky" became so dangerous he had to be shot. Director Riis said "Bucky's" actions should warn park visitors to keep their distance from the animals.

GROGGY 'BUSTER' . . . . . HIS MASTER DIED, HE WAS SAVED

Wife Finds Husband, Collie Overcome By Fumes

A three-hour battle to revive James E. McDonald, 43, of 4503 Monongahela street, Hazelwood, a victim of carbon monoxide fumes, proved futile, but the fight to save his pet collie, "Buster," also overcome by fumes, was successful last night.

McDonald was taking a nap on a couch in his home with his pet on the floor nearby. When his wife returned at 7:45 o'clock she found the doors locked. Unable to enter, she summoned a neighbor, Edward Achenheil, of 4304 Monongahela avenue. Achenheil entered through a cellar window and opened the door. Mrs. McDonald went into the room and found her husband and the dog unconscious from fumes from a gas heater.

Police and lifesaving experts of the Mine Safety Appliance Company were summoned. They hurriedly applied inhalators in an attempt to revive McDonald. Simultaneously an inhalater was used on the collie. The animal regained consciousness within a short time. After six tanks of oxygen had failed to resuscitate McDonald, he was pronounced dead by a physician.

SUNRISE EASTER SERVICE TO ATTRACT 20,000 PERSONS

YOUNG PEOPLE CO-OPERATE IN PLANS

Endeavor Chorus of 150 Voices to Sing; Dr. Petty To Deliver Message

Preparations are being made for the more than 20,000 persons who are expected to attend the Easter sunrise prayer service on Flagstaff Hill, Schenley Park. Announcement has been made that the service will be broadcast by WCAE.

The Rev. Dr. Carl Wallace Petty, of the First Baptist Church, will speak on "The Power of Endless Life." The Allegheny County Christian Endeavor Chorus of 150 voices, under the direction of Clyde L. Wolford, will present several musical numbers and mass singing will be led by Charles L. Billeter, of the Epworth League.

In preparation for the sunrise services, 16 members of the chorus will present a program Wednesday evening over WCAE. The chorus is the same one which will sing during the Passion Play next week in Syria Mosque.

Young peoples' religious organizations of Allegheny County will co-operate in plans for the service. William S. Wise, president of the Allegheny County Christian Endeavor Union, heads the committee in charge of the service.

The service will be amplified by a public address system, the committee has announced. In the event of inclement weather, the services will be taken to the First United Presbyterian Church, Fifth avenue and Thackeray street, where it will also be broadcast by WCAE.

De Molay Chapter At Bellevue Church

North Boroughs Chapter, Order of DeMolay, in a body will attend services in the Bellevue Christian Church at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow. The Rev. Frank G. Helme, pastor, will preach on "The Man of the Hour."

The third union service to be conducted by the Council of Churches of Wilkinsburg will be held tomorrow night in the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Robert E. Speer, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, will be the guest speaker.

The Rev. Dr. John M. Versteeg, pastor of the South Avenue Church, will preside, and pastors of the co-operating churches will take part in the service. Music will be presented by the quartet of the South Avenue Church, under the direction of William H. Oetting, organist.

Homestead Park Sunday Services

"Christ Our Mediator" will be the Palm Sunday sermon tomorrow morning in the Messiah Lutheran Church, Homestead Park. The Rev. L. W. Rupp, pastor, will speak at the evening service on "The Supper in the Upper Room."

PALM SUNDAY MARKED BY CHURCHES

Pageants, Special Choruses Feature Day's Program; Holy Week Planned

With the celebration tomorrow of Palm Sunday, commemorating the procession of palms through Jerusalem, churches of Pittsburgh and vicinity will usher in a period of religious activity marking the Passion Week.

Palms will be distributed at the close of high masses tomorrow morning in all Catholic churches. Special music has been prepared for presentation in many masses.

CHORAL TO SING

The Choral Society of Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, under the direction of Alfred Hammer, will present the cantata "Stabat Mater" at the evening service. Because of the anticipated attendance, admission will be by ticket, church officials have announced. At the morning service the Rev. N. R. High Moor, dean, will speak on "On a Cross."

Special Palm Sunday services will be held in the East End Christian Church, South Highland avenue and Alder street, at which the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers will speak on "For or Against." The chorus will present special music. At the evening service the open forum will discuss "Beloved America, What Is Wrong With Her?" The church will join in the union Holy Week services to be conducted by several churches of the East End district.

Dr. John M. Vander Meulen, of Louisville, Ky., will speak throughout the week at the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, North Highland avenue and Station street. He will occupy the pulpit at both services tomorrow.

UNION SERVICES

Services will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in the Stewart Avenue Evangelical Lutheran Church, Brownsville road. The Rev. Herman M. Meyer will be in charge. Services will be held from Tuesday to Friday in the Gustavus Adolphus Lutheran Church, Evaline street, of which the Rev. John E. Nelson is pastor.

Union services of the First Baptist, Christ Methodist Episcopal and the East End Christian Churches will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday night in the respective churches.

1,500 Young People Sponsor Play At Mosque

The arrival here tomorrow of Josef Meier, German portrayer of the Christus, with his company, will herald the opening Monday of the Passion Play which will be presented in Syria Mosque for a two-weeks period.

The play is being sponsored here by more than 15,000 members of young peoples' religious organizations. It will be offered in English.

During the play the Allegheny County Christian Endeavor Chorus, under the direction of Clyde L. Wolford, will sing a special program of sacred music. So as not to attract the attention of the audience from the action of the play, the choir will sing from backstage.

Meier was a member of the cast which presented the Frieburg Passion Play here two years ago. It was at his suggestion that a cast was formed to present the play in English.

Pastor to Confirm Fifteenth Class

The Rev. E. F. Brand, of the First St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, South Eighteenth and Sidney streets, will tomorrow morning confirm the fifteenth class during his pastorate in that church. A reunion of all confirmed in First St. Paul's Church for 60 years has been arranged for April 3.

Knoxville Church To Open Revival

A two-weeks revival campaign will open Monday night in the Knoxville Christian Church, Knox avenue, at which the Rev. Arden S. Hanes, of Brownsville, will be the evangelist. The Rev. W. H. Hanna, pastor, will conduct the music service.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Society Happenings

CITY CLUB HOLDS LIBRARY PARTY

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Wedding bells ring this month for several members of Pittsburgh's smart set and then there is another faint chiming that may be Easter bells, but I think it presages other weddings for the very near future. And among them may be that of Mary Louise Lerch and Donald G. Brien, of Maryland avenue.

At least that is the rumor that begins when entertainments are given for fiancees.

Miss Mary Louise Lerch was honored with a tea yesterday afternoon in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association by her fiance's sister, Miss Doris Alden Brien. It was a charming affair, with gay spring flowers bringing a hint of April.

As a surprise at the tea came the announcement of the engagement of the hostess to George L. Tamm, Jr., of Richmond Hill, N. Y.

Morning Musicale

The March morning musicale under the direction of Mrs. Taylor Allderdice, Mrs. William Knox and Mrs. John E. Nelson will be held in the home of Mrs. M. D. Kirk, Carnegie place, Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. William Mahaffy, Jr., contralto; Mrs. Hazel Peck Spear, pianist, and Mrs. Catherine Defenbacher, violinist, will give the program.

* * *

Returning home yesterday for the spring vacation from the Manlius School, Manlius, N. Y., were William Berger Dunlap, son of the W. K. Dunlaps, South Highland avenue; Thomas MacConnell III, son of the junior Thomas MacConnells, Warwick terrace; Alfred E. Ward, son of the T. C. Wards, Walnut street, and Lewis Robert Titus, son of S. J. Titus, of Cathedral Mansions.

Literary Program Contains Some Surprises

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The library committee members of the Woman's City Club made a gala occasion out of their library party last night. There was much dressing up, there was a fine attendance, a stimulating and somewhat unusual entertainment and a surprise feature or two for good measure.

Miss Lucetta Burns, chairman for the evening, started the ball rolling by introducing several people who took part in a literary symposium—Miss Suzanne Beatty, chairman of the library committee; Miss Marian Jobson, Mrs. F. Orr Johnson, Miss Vanda E. Kerst, Miss Emma Mellor Campbell, Mrs. A. S. F. Keister and George Seibel. Their contributions consisted of excerpts from books, reminiscences of literary personages and of pilgrimages to literary shrines. Mrs. Johnson, in her extremely humorous talk, asked when a writer is an author and when his turn came Mr. Seibel undertook to answer her.

James Haden, baritone, with Virginia Hewitt Fisher at the piano, offered a group of solos and a novel feature was a book show in which a number of young girls were dressed to represent books and paraded before the audience as in a style show.

Represent Books

Climaxing the evening came the surprise presentation to Miss Beatty of a book bound in gold brocade and beautifully inscribed, which conveyed the information that the club's library association has 64 charter members and, therefore, $64 with which to purchase new books.

Bound copies of the National Geographic for the last 14 years was also presented, these being a memorial to Miss Madeline Gangwisch, one of its founders.

The supper table was exquisitely decorated with spring flowers and candles in silver holders that were tied with trailing bows of maline. Mrs. George S. Baton, the president; Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock, Mrs. Henry Clay McEldowney and Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, all of whom were past presidents, poured.

Musical Program

A full program has been arranged for the annual musicale of the Travellers, which will take place Tuesday afternoon in the Congress of Clubs. Adele Eggers Furniss will direct the program and will also take part in it, assisted by Mrs. William R. Thompson, soprano; Mrs. C. P. Cloak, contralto; Mrs. Roland Haines, accompanist; John Kuczmarski, violin, and Mrs. Norval R. Daugherty, reader.

Mrs. R. W. Berberich is taking reservations for the tea which will follow the program and which will be in charge of the social committee.

At the meeting of the Woman's Club of Sheraden held yesterday afternoon, the members enjoyed an especially interesting program with Dr. S. G. Williams, of the University of Pittsburgh, as speaker.

Dr. Williams, whose special work is in the zoology department, gave an illustrated lecture entitled "A Naturalist in the Jungle," describing his experiences in South America, where he led three expeditions to bring back specimens of rare insects.

Miss Annabelle Carter, a blind girl, who was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh and is now a student at Carnegie Tech, contributed the musical program. A sale for the blind was held.

Books Reviewed

Two very fine book reviews, readings and a talk were on yesterday's program for the literary department of the Congress of Clubs. The reviews, which were given by Mrs. J. Charles Wilson and Mrs. J. Gordon Ogden, were of Margaret Ayer Barnes' "Years of Grace" and Henry Chamberlin's "Soviet Russia." Mrs. Norval R. Daugherty gave the readings and the talk, which was on "The Kind of Man We Need for the Hour," was by the Rev. Dr. George H. Broening.

A man of boundless energy, with a vision of world neighborliness, a leader, an ageless and a selfless man, a patriot before he is a partisan, a thinking man and a Christian was the picture sketched by Dr. Broening.

To Form Play Unit

On Tuesday the Dramatic Club of the Downtown Branch, Young Men's Christian Association will meet to organize a play-reading committee which will select plays for future performances.

* * *

A program of unusual interest was given last night by the Turtle Creek Woman's Club when the members met with Mrs. C. K. Patterson, of Maple avenue. It was a recital of readings and music from Ireland, Italy, Germany, France and the United States, under the direction of Mrs. C. C. Johnston, who also contributed vocal numbers. Mrs. Melrose Morsini, Miss Alberta Church and Miss Anna Beck presented piano numbers; Mrs. E. K. Ocker read and sang, and Mrs. L. G. Graham and Mrs. R. C. Byers also sang. Each group, arranged nationally, was preceded by an historical sketch of the country it represented.

The Perrysville avenue Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold its monthly meeting Monday afternoon at St. Luke's Lutheran Church, North Side. Mrs. H. C. Beller will be the speaker. Mrs. G. Arthur Fry will conduct the devotions. Mrs. W. C. Kreiling will be the soloist and a playette, entitled "The Paper That Was Found," will be given.

Mrs. Susan Walker Hamill Married To Herbert H. Melcher at Ceremony in Gotham

A wedding that took place yesterday afternoon at the Colony Club, New York, will interest Pittsburgh people. The marriage was that of Mrs. Susan Walker Hamill, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Walker, of Pittsburgh, to Herbert H. Melcher, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Officiating was the Rev. Dr. Paul Mansfield Spencer. There was a reception later.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, T. Clarence Heisey, of Newark, O. Her daughter, Susan Duncan Hamill, was flower girl, and her cousin, Miss Augusta Heisey Dockery, was maid of honor. Edward Sperry served as best man.

After a honeymoon in Sea Island, Ga., Mr. and Mrs. Melcher will reside in New York.

To Live In Gotham

The bride is a graduate of Miss Hall's School, Pittsfield, Mass., and of Smith College, and she took post-graduate courses at Columbia University. She has taught in the Finch School, New York, since last fall. She is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Heisey, of Newark, O.

The bridegroom, a son of Mrs. Henry Melcher, of Mt. Vernon, formerly of Cleveland, and the late Mr. Melcher, is a graduate of Amherst, class of 1917.

Mrs. Michael M. Mendlow, of Jancey street, East End, was hostess at a bridge luncheon in her home Wednesday. Covers were laid for 12 guests.

ORIGINAL DECOLLETAGE MARKS THE EXQUISITE EVENING FROCK

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 19.—The evening frock that cannot show a highly original decolletage is not going to shine this season even though it be fashioned of lustrous, gleaming satin. For harness strappings and all sorts of clever new devices are being used to create back interest on the newest frocks. All, of course, are variations of the now-popular strap-decolletage and all manage to show expanses of back and yet contrive to use lots of straps and bands. Very clever all these ideas and very helpful, too, since many a woman who has vowed not to buy another evening frock falls victim to a frock that has an absolutely original back decolletage. Lots of satin being worn at night as well as chiffon. Long, slim, graceful lines still obtain, the whole object of the silhouette being to give the wearer a slender, lithe look even if she be far from such. After all, the main thing is to create an illusion since most beauty is illusory if we begin to analyze at all deeply. You'll like the new evening frocks with their dashing back decolletage and their lovely lines. Such a frock is a real cheer-up lotion, just as effective as any tonic, stimulating with any reaction, once the bill is paid.

* * *

TODAY'S PAGE is graced by sketches of two lovely evening frocks both shown at the recent collections. Let's consider the frock with the highly interesting decolletage, a Lucille model. The bodice in front has a rather high diagonal neckline which leaves one shoulder entirely uncovered. At this side the bodice is slashed beneath the arm to give the open back seen in the sketch. The upper part is drawn through the wide shoulder strap coming from the other side and drawn back again to twist around the waistline in front. It is then passed diagonally over the hip and drawn to the back, where it is knotted in a soft bow. A most complicated design, but well worth the result.

* * *

THE OTHER FROCK is from Bernard et Cie and is of old rose crepe de chine. The softly draped bodice is drawn into folds at the waistline, which terminate in knotted ends at each side. The wide shoulder straps are slit across each shoulder and separate in a cross harness effect in back. The straight hanging skirt has its greatest fulness at the center front in an inverted V shaped godet.

Miss Rethberg

VASCO DA GAMA, who braved unknown terrors to sail around Cape Horn, is the hero of Meyerbeer's masterpiece, "L'Africaine," presented by an outstanding Metropolitan Opera Company cast over WCAE today at 4 o'clock. Elisabeth Rethberg, celebrated opera and concert soprano, plays the principal feminine role opposite Beniamin Gigli, tenor, in the title role. Tullio Serafin conducts.

The work, which had its American premiere 67 years ago, was completed the day before the composer died.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, speaks on "Unemployment" during the Columbia Institute of Public Affairs broadcast over WJAS tonight at 10:15. As president of the federation, Mr. Green speaks for about 4,000,000 organized workers throughout the country.

The first re-broadcast in the United States and Canada from St. Peter's in Vatican City, will be attempted by the Columbia Broadcasting System at noon next Wednesday. The broadcast will consist of the first of three tenebrae services during Holy Week. The word "tenebre," meaning darkness, refers to the darkness during the Passion of Christ.

SLOAN RETAINS PRESTIGE AS MANAGER

General Motors Obtains Highest Percentage of Business in History

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, March 19—Success in a red ink period cannot be measured solely in maintenance of profits.

Under existing conditions, even the strongest and ablest managers in certain industries found it impossible to maintain peak profits whereas in special lines a group of aggressive trend bucking executives were able to report larger net income in 1931 than in 1930. It has been computed that 1,270 corporations reported a 40.8 per cent slump in 1931 compared with 1930.

Mr. Rukeyser

In the automobile industry, where profits for the industry as a whole were substantially lower, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation, nevertheless has maintained his prestige as a brilliant manager. The measure of his performance is not in profits, which have shrunken somewhat, but in the relative success of his company to that of the whole industry.

General Motors last year secured the highest percentage of the total passenger car business in its history, namely, 43.3 per cent, compared with 34.5 per cent in 1930. General Motors also obtained 41.6 per cent of the combined truck and passenger car volume—the highest in its history—compared with 33.7 per cent in 1930. Aggregate registrations of all new passengers cars in the United States showed a decline of 27.3 per cent in 1931 from 1930, whereas General Motors' registrations revealed a decrease of 8.8 per cent.

PROFIT SHRINKAGE

While a corporation performs far better than the industry as a whole, it is a warranted inference that the shrinkage in profits is ascribable to adverse economic conditions, rather than to unsatisfactory management. Several other competing companies, including Chrysler and Auburn, likewise gave a far better than average performance.

I emphasize these constructive achievements because it seems to me that there has been a disposition to stress recently only the failures and shortcomings of business management.

Of course, the social cost of depression is prodigious and the incidence of the hardships falls unduly heavy on the innocent unemployed, but there are some offsetting benefits in the form of elimination of economic waste. In a more rational economic society, the beneficial results could be obtained in a more civilized manner.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stock Losses Cut

Local Market Heavy

STOCKS MAKE UP SOME OF LOSSES

Market Opens Weak But Soon Is Given Support. Kreuger and Toll Sinks

NEW YORK, March 19.—The stock market opened rather weakly, but quickly met support today.

Opening losses of around a point in a number of issues were partly recovered toward the end of the first half hour. These included United States Steel, American Telephone, American Can, American Tobacco B, Santa Fe, Borden, Lambert and Union Pacific. Standard of New Jersey sagged more than ½ and failed to rally.

Kreuger and Toll was sold in large blocks on the news that the management in Stockholm had requested suspension of trading. Several blocks were sold at 1½, one of 50,000 shares. This issue subsequently sagged to 1⅜, a new low and off ⅜.

The unexpected action of the House of Representatives, which voted to restore war-time income tax rates, caused considerable uneasiness in investment circles. While necessity of drastic action to balance the budget has been generally appreciated, bankers and others expressed fear that the proposed tax increase was so great that it would inevitably drive more capital from industry into the sheltered sanctuaries afforded by tax exempt government and municipal bonds.

The meetings of the President with representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Railway Credit Corporation and the Railroad Presidents' Association were favorably regarded as an indication that harmony will be preserved in the deliberations of these various groups. It was asserted in railroad quarters that full co-operation has been shown in the joint efforts of borrowers and creditors to work out pressing railroad financial needs.

While some slight gain was reported in the retail trade by the weekly mercantile reviews, this was partly offset by evidences of further sharp price concessions made in order to move goods. The Department of Labor index covering 51 cities showed for the month ended February 15 a decline of 3 2-3 per cent in retail prices, a shrinkage which, however, is said to have abated somewhat in March.

Sterling opened firm at $3.64⅞ for cables, a gain of 1⅛ cents.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Warner Sugar Corporation and subsidiary companies report for year 1931 shows loss of $1,120,519 after depreciation, interest on bonds, amortization of bond discount and expense, and write-down of fixed plant and supplies, but before additional reserves on accounts receivable, etc. After setting up an additional reserve of $439,684 on accounts receivable and charging out $10,582 for miscellaneous adjustments, there was a total loss of $1,560,185. In 1930 loss totaled $1,269,961.

Texas Oil and Land Company, of Delaware and Texas Oil and Land Company of Texas, report for year 1931 shows net income (including $1,202,974 equity in undistributed earnings of controlled companies not consolidated of $1,381,901 after intangible development costs, depletion, depreciation, interest, etc. In the preceding year net income, including $2,011,602 equity in earnings of controlled companies not consolidated was $2,113,798.

Standard Oil Company of Ohio, in its annual report for 1931 shows net profits of $2,385,785, compared with $5,724,223 for 1930. After preferred dividends the net earnings were equivalent to $8 a common share, against $5.20 a share on the previous year on a smaller number of outstanding shares.

Southern California Edison Company net earnings for the year ended December 31 1931, compared to 1930 were $17,000,000 vs $17,000,000 went for interest and $5,000,000 was set aside for depreciation, leaving a balance of $15,023,696 applicable to dividends.

Independent Pneumatic Tool Company reports for year 1931 shows consolidated net income of $197,195, after charges and federal tax, equal to 33 cents a share on 181,825 shares, comparing with net of $248,681 in 1930, or $3.13 a share.

Consolidated Textile Company report for year ended January 2, 1932, shows net loss of $319,195, after all charges, compared with loss of $1,204,571 in the previous year.

Seaboard Oil Company of Delaware reports net profits for 1931 of $2,127,711, equal to 10 cents a share, compared with profits in 1930 of $860,873, or 48 cents a share.

G. R. Kinney Company reports a net loss of $465,179 for 1931, compared with net profit of $102,193, or $2.62 a share on the 8 per cent preferred stock in 1930.

Inland Creek Coal Company report for 1931 shows net profit of $1,520,345, after depletion, depreciation and federal taxes, compared with $2,602,782 in 1930.

Nickel Plate Railroad report for February shows deficit after charges of $225,147, compared with deficit of $51,305 in February, 1931. For two months deficit after charges amounted to $521,415, against surplus of $15,281 in the 1931 period.

National Dairy Products Corporation in 1931 earned $2.47 a common share, compared to $1.19 a share in 1930.

Steel Companies to Make Poor Earnings Reports For First Quarter.

With the first quarter almost ended, it is certain the earnings reports of leading steel companies will make a poor showing when compared with the corresponding periods in previous years. Operations have been at an unusually low rate so far this year, and the normal seasonal pickup still is lacking. Naturally this will mean such reductions in gross earnings that benefits from the wage reductions and other economies will not show to advantage in the period. Realization that earnings will be poor has been responsible for some liquidation in the steel shares, particularly in United States Steel common and preferred recently.

Some brokers appeared surprised at the retention of the 3½ per cent rediscount rate by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, in view of this week's further reduction in the Bank of England rate. It was suggested in banking quarters today that the bank was influenced in its action by a belief that some of the other banks in the reserve group may not yet be prepared to lower their rediscount rates.

A test of the low range of industrial averages is now anticipated by most students. The action of the market has discouraged those working for higher prices. Quite a few of those who had intended purchasing stocks on a scale have postponed action on the theory that the industrial average may approach 71 to 72 before there are signs of resistance. The manner in which the market can stage a recovery when opposition of selling is encountered will be a significant factor in forming views regarding the immediate future of the general list.

Advices from Chicago state that, while earnings of the United States Gypsum Company in the first half of this year will be below the $2,242,000 shown for the same period of 1931, the company has been able to maintain operations on a profitable basis in the face of the slack season. It is pointed out that such showing speaks well for the prospects for expanding revenues when demand for gypsum, metal lath, insulating board, etc., improves. It is the popular belief in the Middle West that the company will be able to earn and maintain its current $1.60 a share annual dividend this year.

Quite a few market interests are inclined to give more attention to some of the store stocks than to many other groups. In this connection Woolworth continues to be mentioned. Cautious scale buying is said to have been in progress in the stock and is favored by several observers on the theory that the plan for carrying 20-cent articles should work out favorably in the long run as factors in increasing sales and net revenues.

While there is said to have been a comparatively fair demand for the new Nash cars, in view of existing conditions in the automobile industry, it is believed in well-informed quarters that the operating income for the quarter ended with February was small, at best. However, estimates are that the company may be able to show as much as 20 cents a share on its stock as a result of income from investments.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Question

I made you vows—and scarcely were they made
Than I was off along the primrose way;
And, candidly, I'm very much afraid
There's little truth in anything I say;
A tavern is a tricky place to pass—
There always is a song that must be sung,
And who's to blame if some enchanting lass
Looks back at me and loosens up my tongue?

I realize that I have not the traits
That tend to make a proper mate for you;
But circumspect behavior always grates,
And if I did the things you want me to—

I'd die of sheer inertia in a year:
(Do you want murder on your hands, my dear?)

—Don Wahn.

Portrait of a Sap

In Baltimore the other day, Frank and Milt Britton, featured in the "Follies," called on a comrade who was appearing in a girlesk show. The Brittons waited in the wings and watched the show. A strip number was on, and the song accompanying the stripping scene was being used for the first time. The gal leading it sang several choruses and after each stanza the stag audience summoned her back for more—so she would shelve another veil, of course.

On her way to her dressing room, practically nekkid, she was heard to say:

"For a new number that song sure was a big hit."

There, Now

One of the second-rate playwrights who wrote affectionate letters to the politician who attacked the dramatic critics, began to worry last night.

"I don't care really," he pouted, "but I'm afraid of what these critics will do to my next effort."

"I wouldn't worry if I were you," comforted another, "the time for you to worry is when the material you write—is presented in the theaters where critics go!"

The Ace of Them All

"I merely contend," once groaned an actor to William Winter, the critic of his time, "that a critic should be able to do what I can do—before he tells me how to do it!"

"My dear fellow," Winter is supposed to have said, "I'm not a hen, and I can't lay an egg—but I certainly know a rotten one when I smell it!"

Sotto Voce

Theodore Roberts, Lasky thespian, and Fredric M. Morton, UP, have me mixed up with the playwright.

Heheheh

It reads like a gag, but it actually happened, according to E. Phocian Howard, the publisher. Phocian tells of the big-time comedian who is notorious for being a miser. He was sitting in his club the other noon and after everybody had bought a round of fun-milk, he pushed the buzzer to summon a waiter.

He buzzed three times without result. Finally he turned to the chairman of the house committee and roared:

"This service is rotten. Here I rang three times and I can't buy a drink!"

"The waiters," squelched one of the party, "don't believe you."

Two Gunmen Rob Wilkinsburg Store

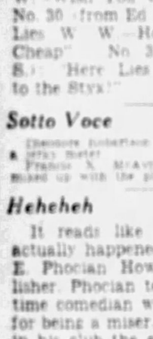
Two armed robbers held up William Sloan, manager of a chain grocery at 1118 Wood street, Wilkinsburg, and fled with $22. Police were notified.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 19.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

One of the funniest things I have read in a long time was that the disarmament conference in Geneva has taken a month off to rest. That's like a vice president of a bank or a night watchman asking for time to recuperate. The Japanese have started evacuating Shanghai. They claim they won a moral victory by driving the Chinese 12 miles back from Shanghai. What good did that do? That would be just like the Irish driving the Jewish folks 12 miles out of New York. What would the answer be at the finish? Yours, WILL.



Will Rogers

Comedienne

Beatrice Lillie, English comedienne, appears in Bernard Shaw's play, "Too True to Be Good," which the Theater Guild will offer in Nixon next week.

Sleuths Still In Davis

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

For the third successive week there is plenty of sleuthing on the Davis screen, where the current feature is "The Final Edition," which, as a picture, is just another of the newspaper cycle which started out so bravely and well with "The Front Page" and has dropped to—well, "The Final Edition."

In it spectators see an intrepid girl reporter, who has been fired by one of those dynamic city editors. She had told him "no" to the big question, but he said he fired her because she had fallen down on a story. Nothing, you know, makes a city editor so savage as having some one fail to come through on a story. She is fired just as a police commissioner has been murdered. You suspect why he has been bumped off and by whom, because you know he has what fillim city editors call "the goods" on the city's racketeering ring.

So the girl reporter, now jobless, sets out to prove to her ex-boss that she is a real newspaper woman—and does she succeed! Ask the crooks. Or her husband. Uh-huh, they're on the way to the parson's when the crooks land in jail. Pat O'Brien is the city ed, and Mae Clarke is the girl.

There is plenty of excitement, with police patrols rushing, sirens screaming, etc.

Ethel Merman sings in a musical novelty film called "Old Man Blues," which is quite impressive. Slim Summerville and Eddie Gribbon create laughs in another of the series of Marine comedies, and there also is interest in a pictorial visit to Ober-Ammergau.

146 Doctors Fined Over Rum Orders

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Judge Robert A. Inch, in Brooklyn federal court yesterday fined 146 Brooklyn and Long Island physicians $50 each when they pleaded guilty to charges of selling whisky prescriptions to bootlegging druggists and whisky salesmen.

Some of the physicians claimed they did not have money enough to pay the fine and the court allowed them until March 25 to raise the required amount.

St. Canice Society Will Present Play

St. Canice Dramatic Society will present "The Nut Farm," a three-act comedy by John C. Brownell, Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 4 and 5, in the School Hall, Orchard street, Knoxville. The play is being directed by Miss Mary K. Barrett, of the King School of Oratory. The proceeds will go to the St. Vincent de Paul Society of St. Canice's Church.

FILM WORLD :-: Hollywood Awaits Chaplin's Return :-: STAGE NEWS

Mr. Chaplin Coming Home

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.

After playing hookey from Hollywood for many months, Charlie Chaplin has notified his studio to expect him home towards the last of May.

The globe-trotting comedian is now on the Red Sea, with stops planned ahead for Ceylon, Straights Settlements, Indo-China, Siam (where he'll visit the king) and Japan. According to his present schedule, Charlie will arrive in Tokio, April 13.

There he will personally negotiate the showing of "City Lights," which has not been released yet in the Orient. The first Japanese print is now on its way to Tokio to await Charlie's arrival.

Charlie Chaplin

After leaving Japan, the comedian expects to stop in Honolulu and there's a remote chance he may join Douglas Fairbanks in the South Seas.

Studio employes report that Sid Chaplin also is a member of the party.

Those closest to Charlie in Hollywood are skeptical of immediate picture work on his return. Remembering his order to buy a $20,000 boat they put two and two together and conclude that he'll spend a leisurely summer.

AND SO TO GOSSIP

Genevieve Tobin's option was up at Universal March 1, but the studio has arranged a month's extension, so Junior Laemmle can pass on it when he returns to Hollywood. . . Joan Crawford told me the other day she has five more years at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and would like to have Clarence Brown direct every one of her pictures. . . In a surprise party on the set, she presented Clarence with a pocket watch set in a $20 gold piece. . . Bill Haines is going around these days with Alice Glazer, former wife of Benjamin Glazer. . . And Sidney Fox still has dates with John Negulesco, the painter. . . Same goes for Tom Brown and Arletta Duncan, young Universal players. She is a New Orleans girl. Won a beauty contest. . . Jesz Lazarus, well-known theater executive, will be an assistant to B. P. Schulberg in the future. . . The Thalians, a group of Hollywood's younger set, will hold their second dance of the season on April 14 at the Biltmore. . . Though her condition is improving rapidly, Mae Clarke will be in the hospital for two more weeks. She had a near breakdown after a severe case of influenza.

PARAMOUNT BUSY

A busy day at the Paramount studio brings news that the Claudette Colbert-Clive Brook picture will be "Bride of the Enemy." Oliver H. P. Garrett is making the screen treatment, but from what "Paramount" won't tell. All the rights, it seems, are not secured. . . At the same studio, Charles Butterworth has been signed to play in the new Maurice Chevalier picture, "Love Me Tonight." This one will be directed by Rouben Mamoulian, who did such an outstanding job on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Oil City Theaters Admit Jobless Free

OIL CITY, March 19.—Unemployed families of Oil City may go to the movies even if they haven't the money. Two theaters are alloting 200 tickets each week to A. M. Turney, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., to be distributed to wage-earners now jobless.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

A Friend of His Father.

SINCE YOU very evidently have nothing better to do at the moment, there's no reason why you shouldn't consider the tale of Mr. Esposito and Mr. Lombardi. Two gentlemen of Italian extraction, they had been friends throughout the years. They started humbly enough in the game of life, but they moved along in nimble fashion.

Mr. Lombardi became an architect—and a good one. Mr. Esposito turned to Wall Street, which was fine as long as he couldn't see the future. The former gentleman married when he was about 33 years of age and was blessed with a son some two years later. At least, he thought he was being blessed. He was an architect—not a fortune teller.

His pal, the genial Mr. Esposito, remained single. At all times he and Lombardi were devoted friends. And when, four years after the baby had been born, Mrs. Lombardi eloped with an Englishman who had nothing in this world except a waxed mustache and a taste for good brandy, it was Esposito who handed out to his friend the old, familiar words of cheer and comfort.

"You see, Tony," he asserted, "things are never as bad as they look at the moment. You loved your wife very much. I know that. But if she could do what she has done, aren't you far better off in the long run?

And another thing. You have your son. He's a grand boy, and he is now yours alone. Surely it will be a comfort to you to watch him grow and develop, to see him move ahead in life. Think of what that will mean and how proud you will be of him. Doesn't that thought make you happy?"

Lombardi's eyes began to sparkle. He gripped Esposito's arm.

"Joe," he cried, "you're right. I must forget about that woman in order to care for my son. He is a wonderful child, and he has a keen brain for one so young. It is easy to see that he takes after his father.

But he must take after his father in more ways than one. Do you know what I am going to do with him, Joe? I am going to make him one of the greatest architects in the world. That's what I will work on from now on. He is only 4 years old now, but the time flies very rapidly. Almost as rapidly as my wife did with that waxed mustache.

That's what we'll do from now on, Joe. You're absolutely right. The three of us will be pals, you, the boy and I. That's all I will think about. I am putting all thoughts of my wife from my mind this very minute. You'll see that I'll never discuss her again.

But I can't help wondering, Joe. What do you suppose she's doing now?"

The boy grew older, as Heywood Broun once discovered. And much as it pains me to report it, he didn't turn out as his father expected at all. If the truth must be told and told very bluntly, he developed very rapidly into a first class bum.

He was one of those kids that annoy you terribly: one of those boys, you know, whom you long to poke directly in the nose the moment you meet him. Even his father must have recognized it because he generally spoke rather apologetically to his friends.

"Vincent is a little wild," he would say, "but that is because he is so young. As he grows older, he will have more sense. He will startle the world some day as an architect. Just you wait and see."

When the boy landed in college the folks were still waiting—but they weren't seeing. All he learned in his freshman year was that the bootleggers could still make the stuff just a little more quickly than he could drink it and that it was absolutely impossible to drive an automobile through a tree, no matter how fast it was driven. The last piece of learning almost cost him his life, and it also earned him an ultimatum from his father.

"Vincent," said the senior Lombardi, "I have given you many chances. But this one is going to be your last. My heart is set upon your becoming an architect and if you don't want to go through with that kind of a career, you and I are finished.

"I am willing to do almost anything for you just as long as you will meet me half way. If you do not want to study and you do not want to go on as my son, tell me now. It will make it easier for both of us."

The boy nodded.

"Pop," he said, "I'll do it. From now on, you'll see a definite improvement. Will you let me have $100 to buy some things?"

So the old man gave him $500.

How he did it, I'll never know—but Vincent finally managed to become an architect. And it was only a few days after his father had supplied him with a magnificent suite of offices that the old man passed from the picture. He died peacefully enough—but I imagine the death was really due to the shock he received when the boy actually completed college.

Vincent accepted his father's coin and went through it in expert fashion. The only architecture he went in for was to build castles in Spain for pretty ladies. Within two years he was absolutely broke and with less future than the hobble skirt.

You know who came to his rescue, don't you? Right you are. His father's old pal, the affable Mr. Esposito, called him in one day and offered him the job of building a house in the country. He told Vincent that he would pay him a lump sum when the job was finished and that he would leave everything in the young man's hands.

Vincent leaped at the opportunity. He saw a splendid opportunity to make plenty of money out of his father's old friend. The thought that he would be doing a rotten thing by double-crossing a man who was obviously trying to help him never entered his mind. He wasn't built that way.

So the young man went to work. And what a job he did! Instead of mixing two bags of cement with three bags of sand, he'd use but one bag of cement. In other words, if 200 bags of cement were ordered, there would be 400 on the bill. Just a nice, sweet boy to trust with anything of importance.

What difference was the way Vincent figured it out, if the house was weakly constructed? Some poor dope would come along and buy it. It wouldn't bring much money, but was that his worry? Meanwhile, he would be collecting from two ends. He was making plenty on the bills—and he knew that his fee would be a generous one.

In due time, the house—such as it was—was completed. The young man marched into Mr. Esposito's office and informed the latter gentleman of that very important fact. He was waiting for the other man to produce his check book when Mr. Esposito suddenly leaned forward.

"Vincent," he said sincerely, "you know I have always loved you. In respect to your father's memory, I planned this little surprise for you a long time ago.

"I am not giving you any fee. No, sir. Instead, I make you a present of the house you built!"

Mendel, Inc., In Warner

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Heart of New York," film version of the stage play "Mendel, Inc.," is the new picture in the Warner. It retains all the comedy and human interest that was in the original version. It is wholesome entertainment.

George Sidney does a sympathetic job of the dreaming plumber who invents a dishwashing machine, makes a fortune, but refuses to leave his East Side environment.

His family walks out on him, leaving him alone. In the end, however, they return to their own tenement, which, in the meantime, has been made into a luxurious apartment building.

Smith and Dale, the Jewish comedy team, as two relatives on the lookout for an easy dollar, manage the laughs. Anna Appel, Ruth Hall and Aline MacMahon do well in supporting roles.

The Art Society closed its concert series last night in Carnegie Music Hall with a piano recital by Mischa Levitzki.

A red electric bulb glowed faintly from the footlights in attempt to put some warmth into the music or the player but without success.

The program looked somewhat promising, although about the same music that Levitzki played in his last recital here, but after the Scarlatti, the concert became as dismal an evening as any pianist has ever given us. There was much display of the gymnastics of the keyboard, but all the emotion, all the sentiment in that music was measured with a yardstick. Had we been listening to a mechanical player, we should have turned off the current and gone to bed.

Pursue Dope In Stanley Picture

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Behind the Mask," sleuthing melodrama, which sticks in the horror along with the excitement, opened yesterday in the Stanley. On the stage is Dick Powell's new show, "Laff Carnival," having What-Price-Glory Cohen (Sammy to you) in prominence.

The picture has to do with the U. S. Secret Service on trail of a powerful dope peddler. And Jo Swerling, who wrote the story, must have been impressed by "Frankenstein" for he has his Secret Service men digging up clues in a graveyard.

COFFINS ON MARCH

The big horror of the film, however, is not the cemetery and coffin-lugging sleuths, but a butchering doctor. It's a ten to one bet that his operating table will be a slab within the space of a finger snap, if he doesn't happen to like you.

An efficient cast puts this latest movie nightmare over. Prominent are Jack Holt, Boris Karloff, Edward Van Sloan, Constance Cummings, Claude King, Bertha Mann and Willard Robertson.

Mr. Van Sloan, who played the scientist in both stage and screen versions of "Dracula," does effective work as the doctor, who has a weakness for carving.

MR. POWELL'S SHOW

Mr. Powell carries his stage show along in happy style, and his singing of four numbers, in different languages, is one of the production's highlights. Comedian Cohen tumbles and does monkeyshines. Cherry Blossom and June, two little acrobatic dancers from Dixie, get a big hand. But the smallest one takes a lot of bumps for that applause! There are other entertainers.

Bernie Armstrong offers a diverting organlogue. Broudy presides in the overture pit.

'Bugs,' on Bike, Votes Often in Poll--and Not Dry

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Literary Digest has taken another straw vote of the United Works. Wets won.

The drys threw in a whiskbroom while the wets tossed in a bale of hay.

Some states were for repeal, some for modification and some for enforcement. The whole situation is like the famous Liverpool jump in the Grand National Steeplechase. Some hosses get over it and some don't.

We don't want to question the poll. But we have reliable information that traveling salesmen voted wet in more than one state.

We're the guy who exhausted himself during the first straw vote. We bicycled from town to town voting wet.

The second poll will be like the first. Add them both up and you have a simple sum in foolish arithmetic.

It merely proves that Americans will vote on any subject anywhere, at any time if you furnish the paper and the pencil.

Woman, 109, Studies Marriage Proposal

ST. PAUL, March 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary Barbre is 109 years old today and her son, Louis, 64, helped her celebrate it with an important announcement. He said she wanted to take a fourth fling at married life, but couldn't make up her mind about her suitor, who is only 80.

Mrs. Barbre married her third husband, now dead, when she was 95. She keeps house for Louis, doing all the cooking and washing, and she sews without glasses.

Pastor, Sister Die In Crash of Auto

TOPEKA, March 19.—(AP.)—The Rev. Ben W. Hugg, 65, Methodist minister, and his sister, Mrs. Mary Tweed, 60, the latter of Millville, N. J., were killed late yesterday when their automobile struck a culvert on a highway near Rossville, Kan.

2 TRACE ROUTE OF WASHINGTON

Prof. John Kennedy Lacock, president of the Boston School of Expression and Dramatic Art, and Ray Marta, also of Boston, left yesterday to trace the route taken by George Washington and Christopher Gist from Pittsburgh, to Fort Le Boef, near Erie. They are traveling by automobile.

They left the Washington Memorial Crossing bridge and made Ambridge their first stop. The trip is to locate and map the only one of Washington's important journeys of pre-Revolutionary days which remains unmarked.

Prof. Lacock was born in Washington County, and after graduating from Washington and Jefferson College taught school in that county for many years.

Arsene Lupin Reformed In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Crowds in the Penn Theater yesterday had an opportunity to discuss which of the Brothers Barrymore is the better actor and which has the handsomer profile. The picture deals with some exploits of that Parisian Raffles, "Arsene Lupin," and the brothers might have got together and agreed on how to pronounce his name. But you can't bother about trifles like that when exciting things happen as fast as they happen in this picture.

Mr. Seibel

The Muses of Hollywood decided that John as the arch-criminal would have to be triplets—Don Juan, Robin Hood and Harry Houdini all in one. So he spends his time making love to the pretty lady he finds in his bed, stealing diamond tiaras from the guests at his ball, and escaping from the clutches of Lionel, who is Guerchard the detective. Lionel also has to play twins—Sherlock Holmes and Little Orphan Annie, both in one.

Karen Morley is the lovely lady in the bed and Tully Marshall is an aristocratic hoob—and there are a host of others, well-groomed and well-gowned, for this is that sort of a picture.

After much elegant love-making and expert larceny, John Lupin or Arsene Barrymore reforms and buys a wedding ring for Sonya Morley, while Lionel Guerchard retires from the force. It is a fairly thrilling but never startling romance of the gentleman thief brand.

Bill Robinson's stair dance and Dare Wahl's acrobatic bowknots are the high lights of the stage show, while Lois Miller at the console sings "Auf Wiedersehen" delightfully.

WORLD SERIES HERO TIPPED TO SKID

MANAGERS OF CLUBS that will rival the Cardinals in the National League race this year and try to keep the world champions from grabbing off their third consecutive pennant, do not fear that the Redbirds are going to be a great deal stronger by reason of any vast improvement in the work of Pepper Martin as compared with his form during the regular season of 1931. They won't concede that there is a chance for Martin to approach the brilliant showing he made in the latest world series.

Pepper Martin

While not trying to take anything away from Pepper for the sensational part he played in the overthrow of the A's, some of the skippers refuse to take that as an indication of what he may be expected to do this year. John McGraw says Pepper ran wild on the bases only because the Mackian pitchers failed to hold him on the bags, and that he hit his head off only because the opposing chuckers did not pitch to him properly. He intimates that Martin has batting weaknesses that are known to National League pitchers.

AND NOW COMES Rogers Hornsby to concur in the opinion expressed by McGraw that Martin will not come anywhere near his world series standards. Hornsby, like McGraw, says Pepper can be pitched to—meaning there are certain pitches, or pitches sent to certain places, that he can't hit.

"Martin hit only .280 against our ball club last year," Hornsby said. "That shows he can be pitched to, and I do not believe he will run wild against us on the bases, either." Asked if he rated the world series hero one of the best outfielders in the National League, the Rajah declared Martin isn't even the best outfielder on the St. Louis club.

"THE CARDS' BEST outfielder is George Watkins," Rogers declares, "just as good a fielder as Martin and a more dangerous hitter. Martin is by no means a sure man in the field. St. Louis is a steady ball club, but teams wear out, sometimes when you least expect it."

Hornsby thinks the Cards weakened themselves more than they realized when they traded Burleigh Grimes to him for Hack Wilson and Bud Teachout. Grimes is a known quantity, he points out, which cannot be said of Street's young hurlers.

FRANCIS X. SHIELDS and Gregory Mangin have not been considered in the same class by the tennis powers, as witness the fact that Shields was a member of the Davis Cup team last year and was ranked No. 3 in the United States, whereas Mangin couldn't make the first 10. Yet Shields may have the job of his life today to prevent Mangin from defeating him in the final match of the annual tournament in New York for the United States indoor championship. In three successive days, Mangin not only knocked off Christian Boussus, French southpaw; Sidney Wood, Wimbledon champion, and George Lott, Jr., No. 2 in the American rankings, but he did it in such amazing style as not to lose a set in the three matches. Yesterday, after his second set against Lott had gone 16 games before he won it, the 22-year-old Georgetown graduate had so much in reserve that he crushed Lott in a love set as a finale. Stopping a man who is playing tennis of that super type is a job to make Shields or anybody else go to the heights.

Bill Elliott

WHETHER BILL ELLIOTT succeeds in riding Phar Lap to victory in the Agua Caliente Handicap tomorrow, or sees the big prize—cut from $100,000 to $50,000 this year on account of the times—going to Spanish Play, Dr. Freeland or one of the other American starters, the Australian entrant will be the interesting horse of the race.

Phar Lap represents one of the most profitable investments in the history of the turf. As a yearling he was bought by James D. Davis for only $800, and since then, in four seasons of racing, 1928 to 1931 inclusive, he has won a total of $68,675. In those four years he started in 50 races, winning 36, finishing second in three, third in two, and being unplaced in only nine.

THE OWNER OF Phar Lap may not realize the hope of seeing his horse beat Sun Beau's world record for winnings, as the big chestnut from Down Under, which resembles the great Exterminator in size and conformation, is still more than $108,000 behind Sun Beau's mark.

But a preliminary study of Phar Lap has led turfmen to believe that the Australian champion, whether he wins or loses tomorrow, will make a better showing on American tracks later in the season than did such famous invaders as Papyrus in 1923 and Epinard in 1924.

THERE IS ONE mistaken impression in connection with Phar Lap's invasion. Many think that he will be hopelessly handicapped on Mexican and American tracks because he must run to the left, whereas on most foreign courses the horses run to the right. But Phar Lap is not a stranger to the style of running followed in this country, as believed. The fact has been overlooked that he has won races in Melborne, where, on a mile-and-a-half track, the horses run to the left, just as on this continent. Phar Lap may lose tomorrow, probably will, but it won't be on account of running to the left.

ANOTHER RUNNING OF the Grand National Steeplechase has served to demonstrate anew that in addition to being the most difficult and dangerous horse race in the world the ancient fixture also comes close to being the biggest gamble. Victory goes not to the best bred or best trained starter, but to the one with the luck.

Forbra, the unknown to win yesterday, was 50 to 1 in the books and almost 100 to 1 in the pari-mutuels. Another rank outsider, Egremont, was second. Shaun Goilin, a former winner, but 40 to 1 this time, was third. Tipperary Tim, winner in 1928, was 100 to 1. So was Gregalach, victor in 1929. That's all form and dope are worth in this race. The highest-priced and purest-blooded horse has no better chance than a mere skate if the fates are not with him.

BIGGER AND BIGGER looms Sammy Fuller as a candidate for the lightweight fistic crown. That seventh-round knockout over Billy Wallace in New York last night added to the evidence of championship class he had displayed recently in handing a pasting to Ray Miller.

Steve Hamas

Wallace, nearing 31, may not be what he used to be, but he had shown by knocking out Frank Bojarski and Eddie (Kid) Wolfe that he was back in such a stride it would take a near champion to stop him. Fuller looked like just that in doing the trick. More than ever he spells trouble for rival contenders and Champion Canzoneri.

BECAUSE THE FINANCIAL demands of Jack Dempsey were too steep for coast promoters, a chance to see Steve Hamas, the former Penn State athlete, tested against the one-time heavyweight champion fell through. Jack Doyle, Los Angeles showman, explains that Dempsey wanted 50 per cent of the gross receipts for his end, and that Hamas was to get $10,000, which meant that on a 60,000 gate the main hunters would eat up $40,000. The remaining $20,000, Doyle says, would be consumed by ball park rental, preliminaries, installation, advertising and state tax. At that the match might have been made, it is said, but for the fact that Leonard Sachs, Dempsey's representative, waxed indignant because Doyle suggested 45 per cent would be enough for Jack to "totter through four rounds with big gloves."

GAMES TONIGHT

Buffalo at Pittsburgh.
Detroit at Windsor.

By CARL W. SHATTO

The Yellow Jackets will present an altered lineup when they meet the Buffalo Bisons, International Hockey League leaders, at Duquesne Garden tonight.

The changes will be made not because Coach Charley Reid was dissatisfied with the work of the Canary Shirts as they downed Detroit Thursday, but because Doc Romnes, star left wing, no longer is in the Pittsburgh fold. Despite Coach Reid's lusty protests, the Chicago Hawks, of the National League, ordered Romnes to report to them in time for their game with the Leafs in Toronto tonight.

TO SHIFT LINEUP

Reid's understanding with the Hawks was that Romnes would assist Chicago in its fight for the Stanley Cup, but that he would not report to the major leaguers until after the Jackets had completed their schedule.

Coach Reid today said that he would dismantle his third line to build a strong second line to work with his starting forward trio of Fields, Gregg and Proudlock. Rodden will remain at center, and Ty Arbour and Stu Dunning will appear at left and right wing, respectively.

Arbour has been performing at pivot on the third line. In the event that Reid uses a third line, Locking will be at center and Barton and Shea at the wings. The local coach today said that he would request the Fields-Gregg-Proudlock and Rodden-Arbour-Dunning combinations to do virtually all of the attacking work.

BISONS FAVORED

With Romnes in the lineup, the Jackets would stand a fair chance of taking the measure of the Bisons, but with their smooth-working attacking trios broken up, the Reidmen cannot be conceded more than a slight chance of downing the pace setters.

A Buffalo victory will drop the locals completely out of the title playoff picture. They cannot lose another decision and stay in the fight for a money berth. The probable lineup:

Buffalo.		Pittsburgh.
Laugher	G	Cox
Berlett	D	Frasier
Murray	C	Malle
Ross	C	Fields
Martin	W	Gregg
Gross	W	Proudlock
Spares — Buffalo:		Lederman, Jackson.
Carr, Aitken, Godin,		Laidler, Bisgardis.
Pittsburgh: Rodden, Dunning, Arbour.
Shea, Reise, Locking, Barton.

LONDON BEATS STARS

LONDON, Ont., March 19.—(AP.)—Holway's goal midway through the third period gave London a 2-1 victory over Syracuse in an International Hockey League game here last night.

SHIELDS PLAYS MANGIN TODAY

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Francis X. Shields, Davis Cup star of New York, and Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, battled their way yesterday into the final of the national indoor tennis tournament.

Shields, third ranking player, employed his blinding service and steady baseline game to dispose of Berkeley Bell, the tumbling former Texan, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

Mangin, 22-year-old graduate of Georgetown University, ranked No. 11 last season, triumphed over the veteran George Lott, Jr., of Chicago, ranged No. 2, 6-1, 9-7, 6-0, in the other semi-final.

Thus, two players who were not considered in the same class by the ranking committee, meet in today's five-set final.

Lott and his Davis Cup partner, Johnny Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, reached the final in doubles by defeating Shields and Eugene McCauliff, of New York, 6-1, 12-10, 3-6, 9-7. They face Bell and Mangin over the five-set route for the championship.

College Swimmers Qualify For Finals

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 19.—(AP.)—Elimination of Ray Thompson, Navy's star, proved the biggest upset of yesterday's preliminaries of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association's individual championships at the Naval Academy's pool. The finals will be staged today.

Yale has a distinct advantage over the rest of the field. The Eli had 14 men in the finals, with three each for Navy, Princeton, Penn, Harvard and Columbia, while Rutgers and Brown had two men each and Dartmouth one.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A WHOLE TOWN CONSISTING OF THREE PEOPLE—The town of Glastenbury, about 10 miles from Bennington, Vt., is unique in that it contains only one male adult, Ira N. Mattison. The only remaining two voters are his wife and mother. Glastenbury, which has been the home town of three generations of the Mattison family, is 171 years old and covers an area of six square miles. It is incredibly isolated, neither road map nor railroad map disclosing the slightest clue to its whereabouts. Ira N. Mattison is the selectman, town clerk, town treasurer, assessor, school committee, road commissioner, grand juror, justice of the peace, general court representative, and the unanimously elected representative of his town in the State Legislature. He shares some of these offices with his wife and his mother, who thus among them hold every office in this curious township. And Mattison can "deliver the town electorally" beyond the fondest dreams of any town dictator. THE UNUSUAL STUNT OF THE "HOMING PIGEON"—The "Homing Pigeon" took off from Bowman Field, Louisville, Ky., on November 20, 1931, and flew due south for a half hour, and, although it did not deviate from its course, landed on the spot where it took off, in the center of the field. This unusual performance was made possible by an unusually strong wind blowing from the direction in which the plane was headed. The wind graph of the "Homing Pigeon's" flight shows that, after ascending to an altitude of 3,700 feet, climbing 300 feet per minute with a speed of 45 miles per hour, the plane was forced back by an increasingly superior wind velocity. At an altitude of 6,000 feet the wind was blowing 75 miles per hour, forcing the plane back in a curved path to the point from which it started. On the North Pole, where the earth can be circumnavigated in a few minutes, no wind resistance would be needed to accomplish a similar result.

SOCCER RIVALS CLASH TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

Two soccer games are to be played this afternoon. In the Charity Cup series, Clan Douglas and Union Switch clash in a first round game, and, seeing that the Clansmen always have been successful against the Swissvalers, fans expect Frank Mincher's outfit to repeat.

There is still a possibility of these teams fighting it out for the Central League title. Douglas has carried an appeal to the national body, and the appeals committee has asked for the details. If the national reverses the local governing body, then a playoff will have to be staged for the title.

In the Panhandle loop, South View goes to Houston, with Verish handling the game.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Do the college sports belong to the students and alumni alone or to the public as well? This is a question that has puzzled many keen minds across the years, and it was one of the many scheduled to be answered during the sports quiz of the Trained Seals of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE a few nights ago. The period was completed before the query could be reached, but the replies of the three local college athletic chiefs were so interesting that it has been decided to set them down here.

The question, as propounded, read:

"Do you think college sports schedules should be prepared with a view to appealing to and inviting public patronage as well as the students and alumni of a college or university?"

The answer of W. Don Harrison, athletic director of the University of Pittsburgh:

"In our case, we should appeal to the public. Pitt is a state-supported institution. As a result, every citizen is a stockholder in the university. Consequently, he has as much right to participate in university functions as has the alumnus and the student. Perhaps this does not hold true with privately endowed colleges, but Pitt belongs to the people of Pittsburgh and of Western Pennsylvania."

John D. Holahan, graduate athletic manager of Duquesne University, replied:

"A good sports contest, a good game with plenty of action, appeals to everyone, and there is no reason why anyone should be deprived of this pleasure merely because he did not attend a certain college."

And here is the viewpoint of Clarence Overend, graduate athletic manager of Carnegie Tech:

"Schedules must be prepared today that will appeal to all. Students demand good entertainment or they will not come out to see the games. This has been proved time and again. For instance, at the larger football games we will have very nearly a 100 per cent turnout of the students, while the smaller games are patronized by less than half of the student body, which only goes to show their ideas are about the same as those of the public and alumni. This also holds good in other sports."

VANGS MEET SHADY SIDE

The Vangs oppose the Shady Side Academy team in the Pittsburgh Indoor Polo League at the Hunt Armory tonight at 8:30 o'clock. The Shady Siders will have a seven-goal handicap, due to the addition of Paul Mazuzzan at No. 2 for the Vangs.

TWO SWIMMING MARKS FALL

Two records were established in the A. M. A. A. A. U. senior swimming championships, staged at the Homestead Library Pool, last night. The home-club star, Lenore Kight, created a new time of two minutes 41 seconds for the 220-yard free style for women, which was 8 3-5 seconds faster than the former mark. Johanna Gorman shaved a second from the 100-yard junior back stroke for women when she was clocked at 1 minute 25 3-5 seconds for the distance. The summary:

220-yard free style for women—Won by Lenore Knight, Homestead Library; second, Louise Clark, Homestead Library; third, Anna May Gorman, Homestead Library; fourth, Johanna Gorman, Homestead Library. Time—2.41 (new record).

100-yard junior back stroke for women—Won by Johanna Gorman, Homestead Library; second, Wilma Moore, Coyne A. C.; third, Florence Goga, Homestead Library; fourth, Emma Martin, Coyne A. C. Time—1.25 3-5.

220-yard free style championship for men—Won by Jack Denny, Pitt; second, Steve Wilmach, Homestead Library; third, William Reinard, Greensburg Y.; fourth, Fred Warren, Pitt. Time—2.35 1-5.

150-yard back stroke senior A. M. A. championship for men—Won by Russell Lindberg, Homestead Library; second, C. Hacer Thompson, Y.; third, John Pitt; fourth, A. Lipsdale, Homestead Library. Time—1.48 1-5.

A. B. C. Teams Roll Into Money Berths

DETROIT, March 19.—(AP.)—Ninth and tenth places in the five-men division of the American Bowling Congress changed hands last night when all of New York's leading teams bowled on the first shift. Dwyers, of New York, reached ninth position with a 2781 total, while Flushing Terminal Recreation followed into tenth place with 2774.

Fred Barth, of Pittsburgh, has been unanimously chosen to succeed himself as a member of the executive committee.

FOUR OWLS WIN FINALS BERTHS IN TOURNEY

By JESS CARVER

Temple University's Owl boxers, four strong, either bled or battled their way into the finals of the first annual championship tournament of the newly organized Intercollegiate Boxing Conference. Three of the Owl leather punchers gained the title round in the semi-finals in Carnegie's gym last night, on the occasion of the inauguration of the tourney. The fourth, clever little Pete D'Alessandro, popping into the gold-medal round by drawing a bye into the final yesterday afternoon.

Bucknell and Duquesne each have three men in the running for championships and for the team title tonight. Pitt, West Virginia, Carnegie Tech and Washington-Jeff have one man apiece in the pay-off round, and Pitt and West Virginia might just as well have had at least a pair in there this evening seeking laurel wreaths of victory.

KAYOS REGISTERED

The bouts last night were well received, most of 'em were hotly contested and two or three of thrilling mein. A pair wound up in sudden and almost totally unexpected and certainly exceptional knockouts. The victim teams were West Virginia and Carnegie.

Leonard Hawkins, West Virginia's hard punching 175-pounder, who came in weighing 177, dropped a short right hand on the classic chin of Mister Tom Waldron, of Carnegie Tech, in the first round of the final bout of the night and Tech's Mister Waldron went out like the lights that followed his departure from the scene of action shortly afterward. Waldron had kept Hawkins at bay with a fast left hand until he ran into that bone-crushing right in a neutral corner. He went down, half way out of the ring, and Referee Carlson did not even bother to count.

HAMILTON STOPPED

Hawkins' triumph was the long one for dear old West Virginny. Towers Hamilton, in the 135-pound class, had his bout with Bill Burley, of Bucknell, won until he ran into a hard right uppercut after 1 minute and 41 seconds had elapsed in the second round, and it took the boys fully 10 minutes to get the cold Hamilton out of the ring. He was hit, and how! Burley was on the taking end of a flock of right and left hands until he set himself and banged his Mountaineer opponent. Burley had the old punch, and in this case the punch was mightier, by a knockout, than the class.

Duquesne placed two of its entrants in the finals by deserved victories. In the 115-pound class Vitulla outpointed Royal Wertz, of Tech, in a fast three-round scrap, and in the 145-pound division Moore, of the Dukes, carried too much punch for Neely, of West Virginia.

MEIL BEATS SEIGEL

Pitt lost a chance to get a second man into the finals when one of the judges and the referee decided that Francis Seigel, the Panthers' dynamic 165-pounder, hadn't enough margin over Sam Meil, of Temple, although Seigel dropped his more rangy opponent in the first round for a count of eight and apparently handed him a decisive shellacking in the other two. Judge Harry Neaman gave Seigel the nod by a wide margin, but Judge Harry A. Little and Referee Simon Carlson decided in favor of the Temple scrapper.

Capt. Mickey Boerner, of Bucknell, stopped Morrissey, of Wash-Jeff, in the first round in the 125-pound class; Bill Beloff, of Temple, outpointed Santicola, of Pitt, in another 135-pound go; Carr, captain of Carnegie Tech's varsity, won over Rubbo, of Pitt in the 145-pound division; Jack Schricker, of the Pitt squad, won by a shade over Red Wilkenson,

Nick Altrock Says:

BILOXI, Miss., March 19.—The Brooklyns and Cincinnati must have rushed through that trade before the sales tax takes effect.

Nick Altrock

As near as I can make out, it gives the Brooklyn fans a swell new infield to chuck pop bottles at, and the Reds now have an outfield that can thump the ball over into Covington, Ky. Outside of that, the Reds' lineup still looks like something they bought down at the 5 and 10-cent store.

Babe Herman was a Brooklyn holdout, and I wonder how he felt when he heard about the trade. Herman now can wear a Cincinnati uniform or dress like Gandhi, because you have as much chance of getting a raise out of those Cincinnati Reds.

BRADDOCK W. P. I. A. L. FINALIST

FORD CITY FIVE IS OUTCLASSED AT STADIUM

By JULIUS LEVIN

New Kensington, High School champion of Section I and Braddock High School, champion of Section VIII, will be the Pittsburgh entries in the Western Pennsylvania basketball elimination tourney of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League in the Pitt Stadium pavilion next Tuesday night.

The tourney was established between a committee of the Pitt Stadium staff and the high school athletic heads. Braddock's fight always made the last remaining obstacle to be put to the final round, the Hatboro passed Swamping Ford City champion of Section VI in a one-sided game, 26-10.

New Kensington qualified the previous night for the championship by a 30 Gasbonia of Champion High, champion of Section V.

Ford City, after playing two exceptionally good games in the early rounds, folded up like an accordion last night and trailed Braddock from the very beginning.

HELD TO TWO GOALS

The Armstrong Cardinals scored only two field goals in the 32 minutes of one-sided play their remaining six points coming as a result of free shots from the foul line. Willis accounted for six of the points with a field goal and four fouls while Barnes and Cullen each scored a foul.

Braddock led from the opening whistle. The first period found the Section VIII champion on the long end of a 5-2 score. Braddock increased the lead to 13-5 at the half, led 19-10 at the three-quarter mark and finished the game by scoring seven points to none for the Campbell charges.

Al Krzywicki, Pickles Kreiling and Tommy Hale were the big guns in the Braddock attack. Hale led the scorers with nine points. Kreiling was second with eight and Krzywicki third with seven.

POOR FLOOR WORK

Ford City was given numerous opportunities to score, but every attempt to register a field goal was wide of the mark. Besides their poor work from the floor, Ford City missed seven charity throws.

In advancing to the final round, Braddock defeated Uniontown 31-18; New Castle, 25-22, and Ford City, 26-10. It is the school's tenth year in the tournament and the third time it has reached the final round. Braddock was a finalist in 1916 and 1917. The lineup:

Braddock	G	F	P	Ford City	G	F	P
Krzywicki, f	3	1	7	Hamor, f	1	0	2
Kreiling, f	3	2	8	Gasbonia, f	0	0	0
Hale, c	4	1	9	Willis, c	3	0	6
Barnes, g	0	0	0	Cullen, g	0	1	1

Marshall, g	1	0	2	Kuntz, g	0	0	0
Totals	11	4	26	Totals	4	1	9

Score by quarters:

	1	2	3	4	Tot.

WINDBER ADVANCES

SOMERSET, Pa., March 19.—(AP.)—Windber High School's cagers barely nosed out Boswell for the championship of District No. 5, P. I. A. A. in a closely-guarded game last night, coming through on the long end of a 15-14 score. Windber and Steelton play today.

STATE PLAYOFFS TONIGHT

Two preliminaries are scheduled tonight in the P. I. A. A. playoffs to determine the state championship. Fifth Avenue High, which finished second in Section 1, of the City League, is the District 8 representative because neither Schenley, the City champion, nor Allegheny, runner-up, is a member of the P. I. A. A. Fifth Avenue invades Altoona tonight to engage Huntingdon, District 6 representative.

Dubois, champion of District 9, and Erie Strong Vincent, champion of District 10, tangle at Brookville, Pa.

The W. P. I. A. L. winner, to be determined next Tuesday night, will represent District 7. It has been given a bye in the first round and will meet the Fifth Avenue-Huntingdon survivor in the second round. The victor in this contest will be pitted against the Erie Strong Vincent-Dubois winner in a battle for the Western Regional title.

FULLER STOPS WALLACE

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP.)—Sammy Fuller, stocky Boston lightweight, took another stride toward the lightweight title last night when he stopped the veteran Billy Wallace, of Cleveland, in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden. Fuller weighed 138½, Wallace 138.

A right to the jaw slipped Wallace flat on his back a minute and 30 seconds after the seventh round began. The veteran barely struggled to his feet as the timekeeper tolled nine, but was unable to continue. He fell into the arms of Referee Jed Gahan who held him up with one arm and waved the waiting Fuller to his corner with the other.

It took Wallace's seconds several minutes to revive him to where he could leave the ring. Wallace, who also is a radio crooner, in the fifth round floored Fuller cleanly with a right to the jaw.

JACK BEATS PAIR

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., March 19.—(AP.)—A technical knockout and a decision were added by Jack Dempsey, former world champion, to his string of exhibition bout victories here last night. He knocked Ruby Miller, 198, of Huntington, to the mat five times in the first round and Miller handlers tossed in the towel on the sixth knockdown. Jack Lorimer, 192, Charleston, went the limit, but lost the decision in his two-round bout.

JACK McCARTHY STOPPED

BOSTON, March 19.—(AP.)—Charley Retzlaff, 208-pound Duluth heavyweight, added Jack McCarthy, of Boston, to his long knockout string last night in the Boston Garden's feature bout. McCarthy was dropped for the full count with a heavy right to the body, and by a terrific right to the jaw early in the fourth.

GAIN TITLE ROUND

CAPT. KUTCHER — MEH

BILL BELOFF — PETE D'ALLESANDRO

All four of Temple University's boxers gained the championship round of the first annual title tourney of the Intercollegiate Boxing Conference, the semi-finals of which were staged before a near capacity crowd in Carnegie Tech's gymnasium last night. All but Pete D'Allesandro scored victories last night, the latter drawing a bye and advancing to the title round in the 115-pound class. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

FIELDS BEATS PASSAMENTO

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor

He may be Billy Passamento to other folks, but he's just a pain in the neck to Ross Fields of Cleveland, thank you. Probably the smallest fighter ever to appear in a main bout here, Billy, scaling only 112½ pounds against 119 for his rangy opponent, took the fans by storm at the Kappahan Arena last night. He lost the decision in 10 rounds but, with his showmanship, set the stage for a booing demonstration by the crowd that was not really justified as the verdict was announced.

Anyway, Ross Fields was glad to get that fight out of the way. He had to do virtually all of the forcing, as Billy wore out three bicycles, more or less, keeping out of range, and then came back countering at the most disconcerting times. The Philadelphia feather-weenie had Ross burning up from missing and looking bad, and only the fact that the Clevelander kept forcing the going and finally got the little busy bumble bee under control in the latter rounds sewed up the thing for him.

SOUTHPAW VS. SOUTHPAW

Passamento, handled by Jim Buchanan, of Charleroi, began making a pest of himself right at the start, when he switched from an orthodox pose to southpaw, and he continued to box in the latter position over most of the route, making it a case of a southpaw against a southpaw. Although he lost, he'll be welcomed back, and the next time it ought to be against someone close to his own weight and around his own size, if it is possible to get anyone that small.

Lee Sala, Donora middleweight, turned in another good win at the expense of Billy Brent, Negro, of the Hill, in the eight-round semi-final, winning all of the way after the opening round. The first two bouts ended abruptly, Harry Palmer, of Punxsutawney, taking the count from Casey Rhodes, Homestead Negro welterweight, in the second round, after a furious, wild-swinging start, and Georgie Schlee, North Side lightweight, losing by a technical knockout to Danny Dundee, of the Bluff, in the third round of the opener when his seconds tossed in a towel during a second count of nine. Both Palmer and Schlee were outclassed.

NO SHOW NEXT WEEK

A fair-sized crowd attended the show and it was announced the Arena will be dark during Holy Week. A tribute was paid to the memory of the late Dr. S. I. Meyers as the show ended, the crowd standing in darkness with Tommy Grant, the timer, tolling off 10 strokes on the bell. Jack Henderson refereed all of the bouts and L. K. Meininger and Jim McLaughlin were the judges.

Between Rounds

Jackie Rodgers, who tops the card at Motor Square Garden Monday night, is an eight-rounder with Baby Face Mathison, of Buffalo, in now a free agent, his contract with Wingy Harris having expired. He is angling with several promoted managers and expects to make a new connection shortly.

Frankie Wallace, of Cleveland, who boxes Jackie Wilson, of Homewood, in the main bout at the Mouse Temple next Wednesday night, has beaten Johnny Datto, Jackie Rodgers, Moe Rutch and other notables with his elusive style, qualifying for the title of blaster of reputations.

Ralph Rinaldo will referee the bouts on the amateur card at Motor Square Garden next Thursday night under the auspices of the Homewood-Brushton Boosters Club. Jack Hagerty starts Little Dr. Paul Fenimore in the semi-finals. Al Stewart will be in the main event.

SIMMS BEATS WINE

CLEVELAND, March 19.—(AP.)—The lighter Jack Dempsey couldn't knock down Frank Wine, of Barberton, last night, but a decision here to Eddie Simms, of Cleveland, in a six-round heavyweight bout.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—The Pittsburgh Pirates are going to have a valuable addition to their pitching staff in Bill Swift, former Kansas City ace, provided the latter continues to chuck them as he did yesterday against the Seals, when the Buccaneers won 5-3 in an 11-inning game.

The same teams will battle again today at the Seals Stadium, Wood and Niggeling will be the probable pitchers for the Pirates.

Swift, who came to the Buccos from Kansas City last year, hurled his first game of the exhibition tour yesterday, relieving Ervin Brame in the fourth inning.

SWIFT BAFFLING

The former Kansas City star proved to be quite baffling to the San Francisco team and limited them to two hits for six innings.

He was taken out in the eleventh inning for a pinch hitter, Claude Willoughby, a former Cowan, was on the mound for the Seals, and he hurled magnificent ball during the six innings he worked, limiting the Buccos to three safeties. The Pirates solved his successors for enough runs to score a triumph.

REGS KEPT INTACT

The contest marked the first time since the Pirates began their exhibition tour that Manager Gibson allowed his regular lineup to stay intact for the entire game.

Lloyd Waner and Tommy Thevenow are the only Bucs who are ailing. Lloyd is suffering from a cold in his right arm and, while it is not serious enough to keep him out of the games, he does not attempt to make any throws to the plate. Thevenow has not been used by Gibson because of the unsafe conditions of the local infield.

Three Indiana Fives Advance at Chicago

CHICAGO, March 19.—(AP.)—Five states, led by Indiana, which landed three teams, placed in the quarter finals of the ninth annual National Catholic basketball championship yesterday. Indiana's three survivors were Catholic High, of Washington; Cathedral, of Indianapolis, and Central Catholic, of Fort Wayne.

Illinois' representatives came from Chicago, St. Mel and St. Patrick. The other contenders were Father Ryan, of Nashville, Tenn.; Bishop England, of Charleston, S. C., and Campion Academy, of Prairie Du Chien, Wis.

Pairings for today's battles:

1 p. m.: Catholic High, Washington, Ind. vs. Father Ryan, Nashville, Tenn.; 2 p. m.: St. Mel, Chicago, vs. Cathedral, Indianapolis; 3 p. m.: St. Patrick, Chicago, vs. Bishop England, Charleston, S. C.; 4 p. m.: Campion, Prairie du Chien, Wis., vs. Central Catholic, Fort Wayne, Ind. The semi-finals will be played at 8 and 9 p. m., with the final tomorrow night.

Benswanger will fill the vacancy caused by the death of Barney Dreyfuss, who had been an official of the bank for many years.

ANDERSON RESIGNS

CHICAGO, March 19.—(AP.)—Dr. Edward Anderson, all-America end at Notre Dame in 1921, yesterday resigned as head football coach at De Paul University. At Depaul, Anderson succeeded Al De Paul for seven years. He did not announce future plans.

OXFORD EIGHT DEFEATED BY CAMBRIDGE

PUTNEY-ON-THAMES, England, March 19.—(AP.)—Cambridge's oarsmen swept to decisive victory over Oxford in the eighty-fourth race of their century-old rowing rivalry here today.

Three-quarters of a million persons, lining either bank of the Thames, saw Cambridge snatch the lead in the first mile and a half of the four-mile test and steadily widen that advantage to cross the finish line five lengths ahead of the struggling Oxford shell.

It was the Light Blue's ninth straight victory over Oxford, their twelfth in the last 13 contests and their forty-third in the ancient classic first rowed in 1829. Oxford has won 40 races and one (that of 1877—result in a dead heat).

The Cantabs seemed to be out for a parade as they crossed the finish line, while Oxford's sweep-swingers collapsed over their oars.

Cambridge covered the short-ened course of four miles in 19 minutes 11 seconds, comparatively slow time. The Oxford crew of 1911 set up a mark of 18 minutes 29 seconds for the full course of four miles and a quarter.

Cambridge's mark of nine straight victories equaled the series record set up by Oxford through the races of 1951-69 and 1890-98.

PIN TOURNEY OPENS TODAY

The fourth annual Pennsylvania and Ohio duckpin tournament gets under way today on the Strand alleys in Oakland with a large entry list.

John Milius, director of the tournament, announced this morning that 75 of the leading women's and men's bowling teams from all sections of Pennsylvania and Ohio have enrolled in the tournament.

Bowling will continue throughout next week, the final squads being scheduled to take the alleys next Saturday night.

NICHOLS WINS N. B. A. TITLE

CHICAGO, March 19.—(AP.)—A 163-pound bundle of dynamite, George Nichols, of Buffalo, won recognition of the National Boxing Association as world light-heavyweight champion last night by defeating Dave Maier, Milwaukee, in a furious 10-round battle.

The Buffalo long shot, 100 to 1 in the betting to win the N. B. A. elimination to select a successor to Maxie Rosenbloom, scored a surprising victory over the Milwaukee contender by his bulldog determination. He outgamed Maier, outslugged him at times, and whenever he was stung by Maier's heavy blasts, he fought back with such ferocity that he always turned the scales in his favor.

The contest was the final of the N. B. A. tournament.

ROSENBLOOM BEATEN

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 19.—(AP.)—Joe Knight, of Ciro, Ga., last night took a decision over Maxie Rosenbloom, New York light-heavyweight champion, in a 10-round non-title bout here before 2,000 fans.

SEMI-FINALS REACHED

GRAFTON, W. Va., March 19.—(AP.)—Fairmont, Fairmont Senior, Fairmont Junior, Parkersburg, Fairmont Pirates, Fairmont Pirettes, Fenwick and Rosedale College entered the semi-finals of the girls state basketball tournament yesterday. Results of first games were: Grafton Y. W. C. A., 11; Turners (Grafton), 10; Parkersburg Defenders, 11; Parkersburg Y. W. C. A., 10; Pennsboro Cards, 17; Fairmont Jrs., Fairmont Pirates, 25; Grafton Y. W. C. A., 8.

SCHOOL SWIM RELAYS TODAY

Carnegie Tech will play host to 250 schoolboy swimmers today when the Tartans stage their third annual interscholastic swimming relays. Thirteen senior schools will go after the senior championship, at present held by Duquesne. Lansley's junior title will be sought by a field of eight.

Seven records in eight events were broken in last year's meet, which marked the finest competition of the relays, and although such performances hardly are expected today, excellent competition is anticipated all the way.

The following city high schools are entered in the senior class: Allegheny, Schenley, Taylor Allerdice, South Hills, Carrick, Connelly, Langley, South and Westinghouse. In addition, East High of Akron is sending a powerful aggregation over, and Butler, Clairton and Duquesne also will be represented.

The junior field includes: Carrick, Clairton, Duquesne, Gladstone, Latimer, South, Westinghouse and Langley. The meet is to start promptly at 3 p. m.

TITLE AT STAKE

Two strong teams will come together to fight on the Allegheny Y court, when Central Avenue and Allegheny meet to decide the Y. M. C. A. intermediate championship.

Different Opinions Expressed About Flirting People

Is flirting just innocent fun—even when you're married and have a perfectly satisfactory husband or wife of your own?

Flossie thought it was; but friend husband couldn't see it that way.

"It's cheap and vulgar!" he stormed. "No wife who really loved her husband, or respected herself, would think of doing it!"

Whereupon Flossie grabbed a furious fountain pen and asked us what we thought.

We thought—plenty! But we had a hunch that Flossie might be more impressed if we took a vote on it, so we passed it on to the gang, and did they answer!

A READER'S OPINION

Here's Louise, firing the first gun. Louise once cultivated that come-hither technique, herself, and what did it buy her? Listen!

"Dear Sally:

"You ask what we think about flirting. Well, here's my idea—based on actual experience. I was once like Flo. I, too, salved my conscience with the thought that it was just innocent fun—a thrilling, harmless amusement. Furthermore I assured my better self that it was the men—not I (horrors, no!)—who started it! Yep. They lamped me wherever I went—church, dances, street cars, restaurants, or even when I was in the office, chinning myself over an adding machine.

"Then, also like Flo, I got married. The husband noticed these 'harmless flirtations' right pronto, and proceeded to tell me what her husband told her. But I didn't get het up over it. Instead, I gave the 'old gal' a good overhauling, during which I tried to 'see myself as others see me.' And I did. Wotta shock, sisters! Wotta shock!

"Did I see a stunning femme, whom the gents so openly admired that their gaze just' natchally followed her wherever she went? I did not! My looks, being just average, didn't demand more than a casual glance.

A CHEAP HABIT

"Then what was it? Ah! That 'come-hither' look! That 'don't-you-dare-pass-me-by-without-a-stare' challenge.

"You bet that was it! By the way I looked at men, I had encouraged the very flirtations that for years I had been kidding myself were 'tributes to my charm.'

"Cheap? I'll say! Any woman cheap enough to try it can get by with the same tricks! And men don't admire strange women who flirt with them in public places, Flo.

"Quit kidding yourself that it's just 'innocent fun.' Men laugh at 'Cheapies' like you—and like I uster was. Oh, how they laugh, up their sleeves, and among themselves! I'm still in my twenties, but I've learned that much—and I've sure discarded that vile habit.

"Am I right? Say! My self-respect has grown a thousand per cent; and so has my husband's respect for me.

"LOUISE."

Pretty straight talk, I'll say. And straight to the point, too. But A. B. has other ideas.

"Of course some flirting is vicious," he admits, "but Florence doesn't seem to be in that class. She is expressing a perfectly natural and healthy desire to appear attractive to men.

"Her husband doesn't know it, nor does she, perhaps, but unconsciously Florence is comparing other men to him. If the comparison doesn't flatter him, it's up to him to see that it does.

KEEPING HIM GUESSING

"Instead of admitting it makes him feel 'cheap,' he should imitate her. That would just make her see him as a Simple Simon. What he should do is to try a little flirting with Florence himself, once in a while. But of course flirting takes practice, so if he will practice it on others first, he'll learn how to flirt with her.

"She is keeping him guessing. Let him keep her guessing a little, instead of fussing with her."

That's A. B.'s idea, and many will applaud it; but it gets no hand from me.

If I had to hold a husband or a wife by such nitwit shinanigans, I'd drop the leash and take up some interesting and constructive task like training fleas to pluck their eyebrows.

For my part, a marriage that was founded and safeguarded by a slick flirting technique is my idea of just nothing-at-all.

But maybe you still don't agree. If so, the forum is still open and Flossie, I suspect, is still listening in. So here's your chance to tell her. Is, or isn't, flirting just a simple, childish sport?

"WHAT THE DOCTOR FOUND" -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Well, now, let us see. You seem a sound young man for a modern fella, who are not of course like the young men we had when I was a lad. But you say you can't sleep, and the moonlight bothers you, and music makes your heart pound, and you can't seem to garner your money when spring violets appear at the flower shops, and you aren't very hungry some days, and in short, you just are not the young man you are used to being! Well, we've already found out that your head seems reasonably hard and stocked with sense, and you haven't flat feet. Now let us see. We'll try just about here—the wish-bone. It won't hurt. Hold your breath. We'll see how you chart up.

"Hum-m-m. WE-ELL. My—poor—young—man. Oh dear. Well I mustn't frighten you—but I have found some surprising things. There is a distinct picture of a young lady—a very delicious and aggravating looking young lady—right on your heart. And your heart, my friend, is performing surprisingly, up into ether-altitude one minute where it rings the bell and puts on the red light—and right down to the abyss, where it registers gloom, the next. Sweltering hot temperature it's running. And it is trembling with the rigors of a sharp freeze immediately after. Dancing light and free. Then drooping like a wet pan-cake. Flying, twirling like a whirling dervish, and then low, very LOW, and slow, very SLOW!

"You are in a very bad way indeed. You are the victim of what is known as being in LOVE. Terrible!"

Correct Manners

Gift for a Teacher

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a member of a girls' social club in school and I have been asked by the president to write to you for advice. The sponsor of our club, a middle-aged teacher, is resigning, and will not be our sponsor any longer. We would like to give her a gift. Would you please suggest something appropriate and inexpensive. J.

Would you like to give her a lovely leather portfolio, Florentine leather, for example, with her name printed on it, or inside, in gold lettering? You can get these lovely possessions in a wide range of prices.

An evening bag is always an excellent gift, too, for this kind of giving. If it is a white beaded one it will probably always be in fashion. Or a purse for daywear is always an acceptable gift. A fountain pen, with the pencil matching, is also appropriate. And she would probably love a necklace . . . we all do. Or one or two or three fine linen handkerchiefs, embroidered with her monogram, for day or evening wear, are a welcome gift, or a book of a favorite author of hers.

Bridal Bouquet

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is going to be married at an afternoon wedding and she would like to know which is proper for a bride to wear with an afternoon dress, a corsage or a bridal bouquet. M.

She may do either, carry a bouquet, which will, with this attire, be small rather than the usual large shower bouquet, or she may wear a corsage. Usually brides prefer to wear a corsage with an afternoon dress at an informal wedding. Then the corsage may become such a charming and appropriate part of the costume . . . some gardenia, for instance, for the shoulder or at the waist, or gardenia combined with lilies of the valley or white orchids and one or two gardenia, or sweetheart roses, or roses not so small, combined with lilies of the valley.

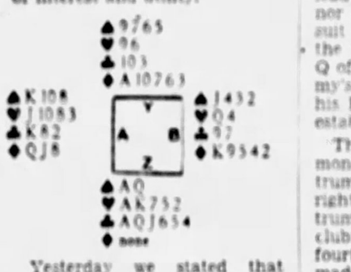
An Interesting Two-Suitetr.

I saw just the following unusual two-suiter bid and played. The hand offered several points of interest and utility.



Yesterday we stated that when a five-card and six-card two-suiter, composed of spades and hearts is held, that an opening bid of 3-Spades is preferable to one of 3-Hearts, even though the spades contain one fewer card than hearts. This is to avoid having to bid four of the higher value suit over partner's response, thereby risking obliging partner to carry the lower value suit to five. But this major and minor two-suiter offers no such problem, so that the rule of first bidding the longer suit should be followed.

Z made an opening bid of 3-Clubs. Opponents had nothing to say. Of course Y had to show his one sure trick and biddable suit with an overcall of 3-Diamonds. Z showed his second and shorter suit, by bidding 3-Hearts. Y indicated his dislike of both red suits, by bidding 3-No Trumps. Intending to play for game at one of his long suits, Z bid 4-Hearts. After long consideration Y passed, knowing that his partner held either a 6-5 or possibly a 7-6 division between red suits. The way the cards lie Z can go game, either at hearts or clubs, but hearts is the easier contract.

The opening lead was the Q of Diamonds, although Y had bid that suit. A did not wish to lead away from the K of Spades, nor did he fancy leading either suit bid by Z. Dummy's Ace won the first trick. Z discarded his Q of spades. He led back dummy's 10 of Clubs. A won with his K, leaving Z with that suit established.

The declarer ruffed a diamond, and led two rounds of trumps, dropping the Q at his right, but leaving two good trumps in A's hand. Two high clubs were led. A trumped a fourth lead of clubs, and in turn made Z trump a diamond. The declarer again ruffed A by leading a cl . No matter what opponents tried the balance of the tricks belonged to Z, just fulfilling his contract of four.

Suppose that Y had chosen to shift the 4-Hearts to 5-Clubs. As the play went, and the cards lie, Z could have gone game. He would have discarded his Q of Spades upon dummy's Ace of Diamonds. Two heart tricks would have been taken, and a third lead of that suit would have been trumped with Y's 10, which B could not over-trump. Dummy's 3 of Clubs would have been led, overtaken with Z's J, and the trick would have been won by A's K. The adversaries could have won a single heart trick, but one heart and the one club trick would have been all that Z could have lost.

Red either A's cards or B's cards been held by dummy, instead of those actually held by Y, game would have resulted. A's cards held by dummy would ha insured a grand slam at either hearts or clubs. B's cards in dummy would have insured game at hearts. Such powerful hands as Z's needs little support to go game at something.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

If Baby's Mouth Is Sore See Doctor Immediately

A careless mother, in her efforts to cleanse her baby's mouth, may do great injury to the lining membrane. This mucous membrane is very sensitive to irritation and prone to infections, and on this account the use of unclean nipples for bottle-fed babies is most dangerous.

Dr. Copeland

Today I wish to tell you about several diseases of the mouth. The first is "stomatitis."

This is characterized by a redness of the mucous membrane. The saliva is increased in amount, and may be so acrid as to irritate the skin around the mouth. The child is restless and fretful, sometimes refusing to nurse.

Cleanliness in all the utensils used in baby's feeding is important. There must be great care of the rubber nipples and proper cleansing of the mother's breast. At the first sign of digestive disturbance, efforts should be made to correct it.

"Aphthous stomatitis" is another ailment. Its symptoms are rather like those of the simple variety, but small elevated spots also appear, and these soon break down into shallow ulcers. They appear in successive crops on the inner border of the cheeks and on the tongue. This disease usually lasts a week or 10 days. Some digestive disturbance is probably the exciting cause, and this must be corrected before a cure can be effected.

"Ulcerative stomatitis" is yet another type of sore mouth in children. It is rare in babies, but common between the ages of 3 and 10 years. Unclean surroundings and overcrowding are factors. The trouble usually begins on the gums at the base of the teeth. Untreated, the disease goes on to deep ulceration, sometimes penetrating even into the bone.

Under medical treatment, even severe cases may recover. The giving of tonics, as well as local treatment, is imperative, and better living quarters must be provided.

"Thrush" is another form of stomatitis. This is caused by a germ. Small, white, opaque patches, resembling curds of milk, are seen on the mucous lining of the mouth. If the trouble is untreated, these join together and form a membrane. When an attempt is made to remove this, the surface of the mouth underneath is found to be raw and abraded. Usually there are symptoms of digestive disorder. Sometimes this disease extends to the throat, and even into the digestive tract.

Treatment of every form of sore mouth should be directed by a physician. With proper attention, recovery in previously healthy children takes place usually in a week or 10 days. The strictest cleanliness must be observed, or the patient may reinfect itself.

All these troubles, you see, can be traced to the lack of perfect cleanliness. When once the mother has learned the importance of this factor in her baby's welfare, she will be glad to give it attention.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The bulbous nose responds to massage, takes on neater lines. Stroke gently from top to tip with pressure getting firmer as the fingers proceed downward. Two minutes' treatment every night, followed by the laying on of pads of cotton dipped in witch hazel, is the beauty ticket.

At the first appearance of a wart, go after it with castor oil. Touch it with a drop or two morning and night. Moles should not be irritated. Liver spots succumb sometimes—not always—to strong bleaches. Ordinary bleaches that chase freckles away won't bother a liver spot, which is a stubborn beauty ill.

Perfumes last longer when sprayed on with an atomizer. One doesn't use as much of the essence and if the scent is applied to chest and arms, the warmth of the body makes it volatile. Perfumes in powder form can be used the same as sachets. Make tissue pads, place them in the dresser drawer along with gloves, handkerchiefs, scarves and other pretties.

If it isn't convenient to have a cut lemon handy as a means of removing stains from hands and finger nails, get a small quantity of powdered pumice stone and a bottle of peroxide. Dip the orange wood stick in the peroxide, then in the pumice, forming a paste to be forced under the nail eaves. It is a bad practice to clean the nails with a metal instrument which injures and roughens the delicate inner surfaces.

Household Hints

A large sheet of greaseproof paper can be pressed into service as an improvised pastry board.

If a saucepan is burnt, some salt and cold water will soften it, and has the advantage of preventing it from burning.

It will not be necessary to starch net curtains if they are rinsed in tepid water to which a generous quantity of rice water has been added.

"Son Has Had a Fight"

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

The mother was plainly quite overcome with shame and amazement when she confided to me that her 12-year-old son had come home with a swollen jaw and a black eye the night before.

"And he's always been such a peaceable boy," cried the mother. "I just can't stand the thought of my boy scuffling around and hitting another boy."

I reminded her that according to her description of his face, the other lad had amply defended himself, but this proved small consolation.

I suppose each mother feels that all her striving and thought and training have gone by the boards when son up and swats some other mother's son. Yet I can't get all weepy with those mothers, some way or another, for there are times when if a boy doesn't fight he's not a regular boy, and I'd be afraid there was a weak spot somewhere in his moral armor if he failed to respond to a challenge to protect property, or defend a weaker person or avenge an insult from another lad.

Fighting in very young children is done for the very primitive satisfaction of the fight itself, and Mother should immediately step in and offer a substitute in some happy activity in which the two combatants can share. This stage passes rapidly.

The next stage, such as our 12-year-old is in, can best be handled through sports which offer competition. For what is competition but a fight without bodily injury?

All business is a fight under the guise of competition and success — the pitting of one man's brains and ingenuity against those of the other fellow. Sports, contests of all sorts, an example in the home of fair play—these will take care of the pugnacious 12-year-old.

The urge to fight can be guided into very constructive and useful channels if we but recognize that it is an overwhelming desire to win—to attain recognition. Give your boy praise and sincere recognition for the good things he does; give him chances to show his prowess along legitimate lines, and he won't have to use his fists to attain the praise and acclaim he craves.

NO. 67.

AN ORDINANCE—Authorizing an agreement with the Pittsburgh Railways Company relating to the repairing of the Longuay Way.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That the Mayor and the Director of the Department of Public Works, on behalf of the City of Pittsburgh, are hereby authorized and directed to enter into an agreement for the repairing of the Longuay Way among with the Pittsburgh Railways Company, said agreement to be in the following language:

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT

MADE AND ENTERED INTO this day of 1932, BY AND BETWEEN THE CITY OF PITTSBURGH, a municipal corporation of the State of Pennsylvania, party of the first part, hereinafter designated as the City,

AND

PITTSBURGH RAILWAYS COMPANY, a corporation of the State of Pennsylvania, party of the second part, hereinafter designated as the Company.

WHEREAS—The condition of the ramp on the Longuay Way connecting said street with the Manchester Bridge, has become such as to require extensive repairs to the floor system, and slight repairs to the superstructure of the same, and,

WHEREAS—The Company desires to contribute to the extent of one-half over the said ramp and agrees in writing to contribute to the cost of repairs to the extent as set forth in this agreement and,

WHEREAS—The Council of the City has set aside funds in the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000.00) to be used for the purpose of repairing said ramp,

NOW, THEREFORE, THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH:

(1) That the City agrees to prepare plans and a contract of the work with its own forces, including the purchase of supplies, materials and equipment and the cost of engineering expenses for the necessary repairs to the ramp on Duquesne Way, at an estimated cost of Forty Thousand ($40,000.00) Dollars, and to perform the same at the cost one of the City and the Company, said plans to be approved by the Director of the Department of Public Works of the city and the Vice President of the Company.

(2) That the Company agrees to pay to the City upon approval of the final estimate under said contract by the Director of the Department of Public Works, or upon completion of said work with city forces, the sum of Twenty-five Thousand ($25,000.00) Dollars, which sum is to be applied by the City to the payment of the cost of said repairs.

(3) The Company further agrees to remove from the north side of Penn-Duquesne Way and to retain the said rails after the supporting ties have been removed by the contractor.

(4) This agreement is entered into on the part of the city by authority of Section No. 1 of Ordinance No. ... of 1932, and on the part of the company by authority of resolution of its board of directors passed the ... day of ... 1932.

IN WITNESS THEREOF the parties hereto have hereunto affixed their seals and corporate seals this attested by their proper officers, the day and year first above written.

GEORGE L. PECK RITES SET

Burial of George L. Peck, retired vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who died yesterday in Miami, Fla., will take place in Sewickley, his old home, following funeral services Monday in Wayne, Pa.

From telegraph operator on the Toledo division of the Pennsylvania, Peck rose to one of the highest offices of the railroad and at the time of his retirement in 1928, in Philadelphia, he had served 55 years and two months, the longest period on record for a general official of the railroad.

He was successively superintendent of the Pittsburgh division, general superintendent of the Southwest system and general manager of Pennsylvania Lines West, from which he was elevated to vice president in 1913. During the war he was federal manager of lines west of Pittsburgh.

He leaves two daughters, Miss Elsie Peck and Mrs. A. C. Van Reden, of Philadelphia, and two sons, George S. Peck, of Philadelphia, and Lyman S. Peck, of Boston.

NO. 68.

AN ORDINANCE—Granting the permission of the City of Pittsburgh to the construction by the Baltimore and Ohio system, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, a loading platform on the west side of Twenty-first street adjoining the warehouse and a switch track extending from its right of way along the south bank of the Allegheny River and along the west side of Twenty-first street adjoining the platform.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That the consent of the City of Pittsburgh is hereby given to the Baltimore and Ohio system, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, to construct a loading platform on the west side of Twenty-first street adjoining its warehouse and extending from a point near Railroad street along the easterly side of said warehouse a distance of approximately 256 feet and to be the width of eight (8) feet.

SECTION 2. The said Baltimore and Ohio system, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, is also authorized at its own cost and expense to construct a switch adjoining said loading platform and extending from its right-of-way on the south bank of the Allegheny River to a point near Railroad street the surface of the street to be restored to its present condition after the construction of said platform and track.

SECTION 3. The permission to construct said platform is granted upon condition that it shall be removed by the owner of the property at any time after six months' notice from the City of Pittsburgh so to do.

ALL of the said work is to be done according to a plan prepared by the assistant chief engineer of the Baltimore and Ohio System, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, at Pittsburgh, and on file in the office of the Department of Public Works, marked "D&O, No. [illegible]."

SECTION 4. The aforementioned plan shall be approved by the Director of the Department of Public Works. The rights and privileges herein granted shall be subject and subordinate to the rights of the City of Pittsburgh and its powers over city streets, and to the ordinances of the City of Pittsburgh relating thereto, and to the provisions of any general ordinance which may hereafter be passed relating to the use, maintenance, operation and use of tracks on city streets and compensation for same.

SECTION 5. The said Baltimore and Ohio System, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, shall bear the full cost and expense of the repaving and repair of the street pavement damaged, repair of sewers, water lines and other surface and sub-surface structures which may be in any way damaged or disturbed by reason of the construction, maintenance, operation and use of said tracks and of the said work, including the repaving of the street damaged, shall be done in the manner and at such times as the director may order, and shall be subject to his approval and supervision.

SECTION 6. The rights and privileges granted by this ordinance are granted upon the express condition that the City of Pittsburgh, without [illegible], reserves the right to cause the removal of said tracks upon payment, at any time within six months through its proper officers, pursuant to a resolution or ordinance of Council to the said Baltimore and Ohio System, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, to that effect, and that the said tracks shall be removed at or before the expiration of said six (6) months, forthwith remove the said track and replace the street to its original condition at its own cost and expense.

SECTION 7. The Baltimore and Ohio System, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, shall assume any liability of the City of Pittsburgh for damages to persons or property, including the street and sub-surface structures, caused by reason of the construction, maintenance, operation and use of said track, and it is the condition of this grant that the City of Pittsburgh assumes no liability to either persons or property on account of this grant.

SECTION 8.—The foregoing rights and privileges are granted subject to the following conditions, to-wit: This ordinance shall become null and void unless within sixty (60) days after its passage and approval the Baltimore and Ohio System, operating the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad Company, shall file with the City Controller its certificate of acceptance of the provisions of the ordinance and certificate to be executed by the president or vice president and secretary or assistant secretary of the company, with its corporate seal attached.

SECTION 9. That any ordinance or part of ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed so far as the same affects this ordinance.

Suzanne Suggests That Lily Lou Give Her Child to Swiss Family

CHAPTER XXXIX.

"A boy!" Nita Nahlman cried, bending over the bed in which Lily Lou and the little swaddled red thing lay. "And what have you named it?"

Lily Lou shook her head. She couldn't talk. She didn't want to ever try to talk again. Not even to tell Madame Nahlman to please not shake the bed. Every time anyone touched the bed a pain shot up from her temples and out through the top of her head. But it was easier to bear it than to try to talk.

The nursing sister made clucking noises as she rocked the babe she had taken from Lily Lou's unresisting arms.

"He is a sweet, adorable, darling thing!" the fur-coated prima donna crooned, leaning over the sister to get a better look.

Lily Lou shut her eyes. She was so tired.

When she opened them again Madame Nahlman was gone. The sweet-faced night sister sat dozing by the window, her head sunk on her breast, her rosary resting in her limp hands.

Lily Lou looked furtively for the baby. She hoped it wasn't in the room. When she saw it she wanted to cry, she couldn't remember why. So she closed her eyes again. It was better to sleep. Sleep, and forget.

DISTURBED OFTEN

They were always waking her. Always wanting to move her and straighten the sheets and plump the fat feather pillows. And they couldn't do a thing without talking. Talk! Talk! Talk! To her—though she couldn't understand a word—to each other—to the doctor—

There were two day sisters who came in and out, white-coiffed and aproned. One was rosy and wore glasses. And one was pale and did not wear glasses. The rosy one brought the baby to her. Lily Lou let it lie there in the crook of her arm, and kept her eyes shut. This it seemed was not pleasing to the rosy sister. She made clucking noises with her tongue, and talked at great length in German. Evidently all about the baby's charm.

The pale sister brought trays of food, and made clucking noises with her tongue also. Sometimes she became quite cross because Lily Lou wouldn't eat, and the word "Professor" was used to the accompaniment of a wagging forefinger. Professor seemed to be another name for Herr Doctor. Rather than risk the Profesor's displeasure and further argument she always opened her mouth and swallowed what was offered. Then the sister would smile and nobody would bother her for a little while.

WELCOMES SLEEP

It was so good to be let alone. They let her alone so seldom. Always the fussing of the sisters. Their gutteral whispers.

Pain that gnawed so that she tossed and twisted in a frenzy of feverish discomfort. Then the sharp thrust of a needle in her arm. Then sleep. Sleep that never lasted long enough. Sleep that began to elude her long before she wanted to wake. Sleep that cast out pain. Sleep that was forgetfulness . . .

Into her forgetfulness the doctor forced himself, at intervals that had no time. Sometimes he was a dark silhouette against the sunshine of the window, and she knew it was day. Sometimes he was a shadow in the light of the lamp, and she knew that it was night.

"Don't you know me? Don't you remember what has happened?"

The doctor spoke English. Lily Lou wished that he did not. She always answered his questions as quickly as she could so that he would go away again, and she could slip back into forgetfulness.

"Don't you know that you have a fine baby boy?"

Didn't she know? Dear God, how could she forget? They wouldn't let her forget . . . that night in the apartment . . . her screams . . . one of the servants bringing him. Herr Doctor Sanders from across the street.

Being put on a stretcher . . . strange faces . . . Krunkenhaus . . . that meant hospital . . . Agony that transcended time . . . Sisters with blue dresses and thick white aprons like butchers wear . . . Her own voice, begging, begging for something . . .

PRIDE GONE

Broken, wracked all her pride gone, crying out like a little animal that is terribly hurt. The spectacled face of Herr Doctor Sanders, the pupils of his eyes immense behind thick lenses . .

And then the thing over her face, and the sharp, sudden fear of the dark into which she was rushing . . . rushing . . . hurtling into bits.

Oblivion . . . blessed oblivion . . . But they wouldn't let her have it, they kept calling her back, the sisters with their trays and their medicines, the spectacled Herr Dr. Sanders.

Mme. Nahlman, too. Lily Lou saw her, beaming from the foot of the bed, sometimes. Saw her bringing flowers that smelled too sweet, dainties she couldn't possibly eat, letters that she didn't want to read.

Sometimes she picked up the letters, and set them down again listlessly. What could anyone have to say that would matter to her now? She fingered two thick envelopes from Woodlake, addressed in her mother's pedagogic hand . . . What did her mother have to do with her now? Her mother was writing to a girl who was studying to be an opera star, not to this sick woman she had turned into . . .

She put the letters down unopened. Tears welled under her tightly closed lids, rolled down her cheeks.

"Tech! Tech!" The rosy day nurse was right at her side with a big white handkerchief. They wouldn't even let her cry. Lily Lou bit her lip, lay silent, pretending to sleep.

SUSANNE VISITS

Bustling. Creaking of the rosy sister's starched skirts. More clucking noises. Bubchen! The rosy sister was bringing the baby to comfort her . . . to comfort her! Oh, dear God, how funny! How terribly, ghastly funny!

The little red thing in the blanket made small nuzzling noises as his blind, groping mouth found her breast. Lily Lou turned her face toward the wall. The little head was dark and silky, but there was something about it, about the ears . . .

"Take it away, please," she begged. "Please take it away, Schwester!"

The sister bustled forward, and right at her heels came Susanne Coin, who had probably been in the room right along. Nobody ever asked if they might come in, nobody cared whether she wanted to see them or not, they just came.

"Hello," she said, making the effort because it was Susanne's first visit, trying not to mind when Susanne kissed her on both cheeks.

"The sweet baby. Do let me hold him, Schwester. Oh, the darling! How lucky you are!"

Lily Lou cast a suspicious glance from under her lashes. "Lucky." She?

"How happy you will be now!" Susanne said earnestly, her pleasant pink face alight with interest. "Think of it, a son! I myself have desired a son. I want to be a mother. I adore motherhood, but I have not the courage to have one without a husband. But you American girls! There! With you such a thing is nothing. Such courage! Such progress! How I envy you!"

Lily Lou shut her eyes. The old trick of pretending to sleep.

Madame Nahlman sent the flowers. Do you like them? Now tell me what you have named the baby?"

"I haven't named it yet."

"It! You're the first mother I ever heard call her child 'it'. Really, Miss Lansing."

Robin. I think. Yes, I'll call it him. Robin."

"Well! That's better! After his . . ."

"After no one. I always liked the name, that's all. Robin—Robin Lansing—"

That settled she dropped her eyes again. Lay there motionless, her black hair a somber frame for her pallid face, dark lashes mercifully veiling tell-tale eyes.

Susanne Coin stood with the infant in her arms, rocking him gently.

"Would you like to have him adopted? By a good rich Swiss family? They could give him a good home. Perhaps better than you, who will soon be singing again."

She broke off, as the sister, with a little cry, elbowed past her to the bed.

Lily Lou was not faking oblivion this time. Her jaw had dropped. She was staring straight at Susanne Coin with eyes that were already glazed and sightless.

Synopsis

Lily Lou Lansing has ambitions to become an opera singer. She meets Kentfield Sargent, son of a wealthy shipper. Ken is also interested in Peggy Sage, prominent society girl. Ken admits his love for Lily Lou and they go away and are married. When Lily Lou first sees Ken's mother she is told that Ken was not old enough to get married. Anxious days follow. Then Lily Lou is told by Ken's father that the marriage has been annulled. He gives her $500 and a ticket to New York. In New York she has a hard time getting a job and her money runs low. From a home town paper she reads that Ken has become engaged to Peggy. She learns that she is to become a mother. She gets a job as accompanist with Dwight Gwin, voice teacher. Nita Nahlman, famous opera singer, hears Lily Lou sing and offers to take her to Europe to study. Later Lily Lo explains her circumstances to the singer, expecting the offer to be withdrawn. She is invited to take the trip regardless and decides to do so. They go to England first and then to France. They go to Vienna, where Lily Lou becomes ill.

Now Go On

Mme. Nahlman's maid visited Lily Lou for the first time.

HEART OF A WIFE

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Begins Writing Final Act of Her Play

There have been several occasions in my married life when I have seen in my husband's eyes "the light that never was on sea or land." But never have I seen his face so warmly illumined as when I had told him that I would not accept his gift of the little workshop bungalow unless he promised to except himself from the prohibition against interrupting me at my writing which he had laid down for the rest of the family.

"My own generous girl," he said holding me more closely, "this is so like you. Tell me," with a sudden fiercely possessive note in his voice, "did you say that because perhaps you're going to be as lonesome away from me, old dear, as I am away from you?"

"You ought to know that without my telling you," I returned.

"And you won't mind no matter how often I interrupt?" he asked.

"Indeed, no," I answered earnestly, wondering as I did so whether I was speaking "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." For all unbidden, there came to me a sudden vision of what Dicky's face would resemble if I should drop into his studio at any moment the whim seized me to speak to him regardless of the importance of the piece of work upon which he happened to be engaged.

"You adorable little liar," he said, his eyes alight with mischief and tenderness. "You don't love me any better than I love you, and I know that you'd get tossed out of the seventh-story window if you wandered into the studio some time when I'm getting out a rush drawing and desired to know whether I loved you as much at that hour as I did the day before at the same time."

"We-ll," I admitted, "I don't know what I might do if you came in wanting to know about your missing laundry just as I was working up to a grand climax, but I do know that almost all of the time you'll be very welcome. In fact, I shall miss you sorely if you don't come often."

"Let's dedicate the shack on that, this way," he said softly. His lips came down on mine in a lingering kiss, and I drank the headiest of all draughts—for a wife whose wedding day is several years behind her—the knowledge that in her husband's vocabulary sweetheart and wife are synonymous words.

It was a knowledge which heartened me through the next three days and nights of unremitting mental toil. Lillian kept her word that no one should disturb me, and I saw only Dicky, who came over for a minute or two twice a day, and Katie, who brought my meals and took away the trays.

For I found that my work on the first three acts of my play had been child's work compared with that which I was compelled to put upon the fourth and final act. I knew, of course, why it was that I was so unduly exercised over it. Philip Veritzen had succeeded in doing what Lillian called "putting the fear of God into me" by his remarks concerning the difficulty in writing the final act of a play.

I worked all through the day and half through the night for the first three days, snatching my sleep in naps upon the big comfortable couch hammock upon the veranda, and eating sometimes when the meals were brought in, but more often long afterward when they were stone cold. My wastebasket, emptied each morning by Katie, contained a hundred times more manuscript paper than was piled, finished, beside my typewriter. But somehow, I muddled through and upon the morning of the fourth day I wearily but triumphantly drew the last sheet of paper from my typewriter, and wrote "End" upon it. Crude it was, faulty in many spots, and I knew that it would need much revision before its final typing. But such as it was, it was finished, and deep within me, despite my natural qualms, I cherished a belief that it was good.

With a queer little feeling that I needed all out-of-doors in which to breathe I opened the veranda door and stepped out into the orchard. The harvest smells of a late August day came to me, and for two or three minutes of the blessed rest and relief that follows the completion of a piece of hard work I reveled in the sounds and smells of the morning.

Then from around the barn came running frantic footsteps, Hank's. They swerved as he saw me, and came directly toward me, while Hank gasped out between labored breaths,

"Somebody come quick!"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

The meetings of the 17 Warner Theater chapters and the two independent chapters of the Junior Komic Clubs were attended by many thousands of boys and girls today.

At each of the chapters the youngsters were entertained with stage shows for more than an hour before the regular program, songs, dances, barrels of fun, magicians and orchestras.

At the Enright Chapter, where Dolly Fritz last Saturday inaugurated the Enright Dancing School, several hundred boys and girls were on hand for their second lesson, and Miss Fritz states that some of the youngsters show unusual talent.

Nineteen more of the Junior Komic Club sweaters were awarded to boys and girls for the best coloring of "Jiggs" which apepared in last Sunday's Sun-Telegraph. There'll be another cut-out for the youngsters to color in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph. This one is of "Barney Google." Be sure to cut it from tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Fine white woolly sweaters with the club emblem on it will be awarded next Saturday to the boy or girl from each chapter who sends in the best colored cut-out of "Barney Google." So get out your crayons and paints and be all ready for tomorrow.

In tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph there will also be another life-size comic mask. The one tomorrow will be of "Krazy Kat."

Two persons becoming more popular with the youngsters every time they appear on the radio are "Uncle Bob" and his little niece "Betty." Uncle Bob, you know is the chap who reads the Sun-Telegraph comics to "Betty" every Tuesday and Thursday at 6 o'clock and on Sunday he reads the big comic section that you get with your Sunday Sun-Telegraph to her at 12:30 noon.

At the Plaza Chapter meeting today, Manager J. M. Morin introduced to all the other members Henry Grance who won first prize for excellence in his school work. Henry is a pupil at the Friendship School, and was just promoted to grade 5-A.

If you are not now a member of the Junior Komic Club, send your name and address, day and date of your birth, school you attend, to the Secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Congratulations to the following boys and girls who have birthdays today. They are:

Belmar: Tony De Cocco, Joseph Martino, Lewis Ross, Jack Abrams, Catherine Dougherty.

Etna-Harris: Josephine Schelinski, Ruth Ruff.

Harris (Downtown): Joseph Secilio.

Kenyon: Buddy Doran, Stewart Rigby.

Manor: David Hollander, Joseph Rice, James Ward, Jr., Herbert Brown.

PLEASANT RELIEF CONSTIPATION

Shoulders droop under the weight of years. Young, yet beauty has fled, Cheeks are sallow and drawn. Unsightly pimples. Keep your system clean and you keep the beauty of youth, its energy, its irresistible charm. Then life is not a failure.

Clogged bowels and inactive liver route poisons to seep through the system. Health vanished and with it beauty and energy. Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets will help save you from this dark hour. For 20 years they have been prescribed in place of calomel to men and women seeking health and freedom from constipation. They act easily and gently, no dangerous griping. Take nightly before retiring. Be fully well proper size.

Mothers... Watch Children's COLDS

COMMON head colds often "settle" in throat and chest where they may become dangerous. Don't take a chance—at the first sniffle rub on Children's Musterole once every hour for five hours.

Children's Musterole is just good old Musterole, you have known so long, in milder form.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other ingredients brings relief naturally. Musterole gets action because it is a scientific "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out inflamation and pain.

Keep full strength Musterole on hand, for adults and the milder—Children's Musterole for little tots. All druggists.

Grossly Unfair

Wholesale "Tag Fixing" Makes a Mockery of Justice. Brief Comment on Local News.

Two hundred thousand automobile "tags"—that is, orders to appear in Traffic Court or mail the amount of the prescribed fine for violation of the traffic regulations—were ignored in Pittsburgh last year, an investigation discloses. Many of these "tags" were "fixed"—that is, councilmen, ward chairmen and other influential politicians obtained immunity for the offenders. What a mockery of justice!

"Tag-fixing" has become an increasingly common practice, and the amount of the fines collected in Traffic Court has fallen off in consequence—$52,916 last year, as against $100,000 the year before. The system is grossly unfair to the comparatively few persons who are too honorable or self-respecting or too lacking in political influence to get their "tags fixed."

According to Public Safety Director James M. Clark, councilmen are among the chief "tag fixers." That explains Council's reluctance to abolish the vicious practice. Persons who have been saved from the payment of fines by councilmen naturally feel grateful to them. "Tag fixing" is a cheap and effective way in which to build up a following and gain votes. No wonder councilmen prize their privilege!

Since the smallest fine imposed for illegal parking is $1, it is a conservative estimate that the city lost $200,000 in revenue last year through the "fixing" or ignoring of "tags." How useful the lost $200,000 would be now in dealing with destitution or in meeting other pressing situations in which the city is handicapped by lack of funds!

Not all the councilmen, thank goodness, are so callous to civic decency and the sense of justice as to be unwilling to give up their "tag-fixing" privilege. Robert Garland, P. J. McArdle and W. Y. English have come out in favor of the Better Traffic Committee's codified traffic ordinance, which makes it extremely difficult to "fix tags." Let it be pressed to a vote.

Pittsburgh may be able to learn something of value in dealing with traffic problems from the Detroit Traffic Bureau, which announced yesterday that traffic accidents in that city were reduced 50 per cent during the past month, principally through a vigorous campaign against reckless driving. Nothing that offers hope of cutting down the awful toll of life taken by autos should be overlooked.

The Allegheny County Workhouse annual report showing the cost of keeping the prisoners last year averaged about 23 cents a day per prisoner will interest unemployed men who find it necessary to economize to the limit. One such unfortunate had a letter in the Philadelphia Record yesterday in which he stated he was living on 42 cents a day—15 cents for a sleeping place, six cents for coffee and rolls for breakfast, 15 cents for dinner, and six cents for coffee and rolls again for supper.

Sixty men were arrested in the corridor of the Pittsburgh Postoffice as vagrants a few days ago, but were discharged in Police Court when they explained they had simply taken refuge there from the cold because they had no other place to go at the time. The Philadelphia job-hunter referred to in the paragraph above reports he has gone into a church when cold, and has never been questioned or made to feel unwelcome.

The objection has been raised to the Chamber of Commerce proposal that the site of the postoffice on Smithfield street be turned into a public square that it would be used as a loafing place by vagrants. Better that they should loaf in a public square than in pool rooms or wherever it is that they loaf now. Pittsburgh should have a downtown breathing spot, available as a resting place to everyone who behaves in a seemly manner.

The appearance of political banners heralds the approach of the primary election. It is to be hoped the candidates will refrain from defacing buildings, poles and streets with their signs. Some of the placards and painted signs that were [illegible] fall continue to mar the appearance of walls and [illegible]ls. The authorities should be on the alert to prevent [illegible]ill posting.

The departments of music and drama of the Car- negie Institute of Technology announce that Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera "The Gondoliers" will be presented April 6 and 7 at Carnegie Music Hall for the benefit of a student aid fund. Tech has many talented students and the performances are certain to be entertaining. The merit of the cause, too, should assure large audiences.

Another artistic show that deserves a large at- tendance is the nineteenth annual salon of photography of the Academy of Science and Art, opening today at Carnegie Institute. It is a real honor to have a photograph hung in this salon, for thousands of prints are submitted by the foremost photographers in all parts of the world, and only 264 are exhibited. Some of the best will be reproduced in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph Gravure Section.

The Sun-Telegraph inaugurates tomorrow "Classi- fied Jubilee Week." Readers will be treated to an unusual demonstration of classified advertising in all its branches. The classified columns of the Sun-Telegraph will be well worth perusing all week, for attractive bargains and business opportunities of every sort are to be presented.

The recent period of snow and ice was not unwel- come, for it gave young Pittsburghers a chance to indulge in winter sports. The Sun-Telegraph obtained some capital photographs of girls of the Pennsylvania College for Women tobogganing. They will be found in the Gravure Section tomorrow. There will be a page of pictures of interesting babies and other attractive features.

The American Weekly, distributed with the Sun- day Sun-Telegraph, continues its series of full-page pictures in color illustrating events in the life of George Washington. The picture tomorrow will be one showing President Washington taking leave of his mother. The Weekly will have more to say about the Washington Bicentennial prize essay contest.

One of the particular timely articles in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly is entitled "Confirming Bible History." It is a good subject to study in Holy Week. The article tells of recent excavations and archeological research in Palestine, which have positively located many cities and sites of Scriptural importance and authenticated the stories of Biblical personages.

Money and Ideals

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Just now the American people are interested primarily, if not solely, in ways and means to decrease the cost of government and to increase the revenue without imposing unusual burdens on the people. That had as much to do with the remarkable vote polled by the foes of the Eighteenth Amendment in the House as anything else. Only three or four years ago the wets could not have polled a corporal's guard in the House on a similar proposition. This week they polled 187 votes, which came within 40 votes of the number the supporters of the present prohibition law could assemble. This means that a change of 21 votes would give the repealers or modifiers a majority.

There could be no greater fallacy than that of some of the liberals in the press and on the platform who cherish the silly notion that the members of Congress are a lot of devotees standing stubbornly against the public sentiment. There is no group of men in America as capable of gauging public opinion as these members. It is political life or death to each member to know accurately the views of his district. He seeks honestly to reflect it, as a matter of self-preservation. If there is a notable accession to the ranks of the repealers or modificationists it is because there is a change in the sentiment of the people.

* * *

If the 18th Amendment Is Modified

Some will ascribe this change to the conviction that prohibition as it stands cannot be enforced, and that the Hoover administration is not trying to enforce it; some will find the answer in the development of liquor racketeering into one of the four or five most lucrative businesses in the land; some will explain that the effect on the young has been bad and that parents are worried. All of these explanations may have had effect.

But we have reached the conclusion, which is concededly cynical, that we Americans are swayed primarily by money. There are idealists among us who would go to the stake or the poor farm for an ideal, but these are few and far between. With the average man whenever a theory or ideal runs counter to his pecuniary interest he concentrates on the latter.

If the Eighteenth Amendment ultimately is modified or repealed it will not be because of constitutional arguments, or social arguments, but because the majority of the people are impressed with the financial disadvantage of the present system.

* * *

Liquor Traffic Is Immune from Taxation

Just now, Americans are concentrating on money—because of its scarcity among most of them. They are reading of the discussion of a tax bill, which will be the most burdensome ever levied in days of peace. They know that this tax is not being asked because the members of Congress or the administration have a sadistic desire to torture the taxpayers. They understand that it must be levied because of the unprecedented peace deficit in the Treasury. In brief, they know that the money must be raised for the protection of the credit and prestige of the nation.

Thus the man in the street and in the home is also thinking of other sources of revenue that may be tapped to the advantage of the average pocketbook. He sees one of the four greatest American industries making enormous profits—and immune from taxation. This is the liquor traffic. He knows that the government once raised a good percentage of its revenue from its taxation. And he is wondering why he should be taxed on everything to the end that one of the most lucrative industries in the country shall not be taxed at all. That may be called crooked reasoning or anything you will, but that is being talked more now than ever before; and is having its effect. As the pressure of taxation is put on it will be talked more.

The greatest danger to prohibition just now is the money phase.

* * *

Champions of the Prohibition System

It is understood that in the beginning the great industrial groups and men of wealth were among the foremost champions of the prohibition system. They contributed to the cause. There are many who are persuaded that it was their money that put it across. And there is no mystery as to their motive. It was said that if beer and liquor were put beyond the reach of the men in the factories they would produce more at the machine and forge.

As far as the powerful industrial and financial groups are concerned it was a money motive.

Now the money motive has veered about. These industrial and financial groups are finding themselves up against increasingly burdensome taxes; these taxes are heavier because of the cost of enforcement, though there is no enforcement; and they are heavier because staggering sums that once came into the Treasury before are no longer available.

Just as the money motive made an industrial and financial corps for prohibition, the money motive is threatening to make an industrial and financial corps against prohibition.

* * *

100 Battles in As Many Fields

There is a cynical saying that it is absurd to talk religion to a man whose stomach gnaws from hunger, and it is just as difficult to talk social ideals to a man who is over-taxed and can see relief from disregarding them.

But the vote in the House against the Eighteenth Amendment was about proportionately divided between the two parties. If that means anything it means that the prohibition question will not be settled by party action. Both Democrats and Republicans in Congress will vote the sentiment of their districts, since otherwise they would speedily take leave of public life. Only when the majority of the people in the majority of districts definitely turn against it will prohibition, as we now know it, pass.

If men who would have voted against the wet motion four years ago voted for it this week we may be sure it is because there has been a change in the sentiment of their constituents. Thus the prohibition fight really is in the Congressional districts. This means not one battle on a national field, but more than 400 battles in as many fields.

* * *

As Plain as A Pike Staff

Just what Mr. Hoover's position may be is now being foolishly discussed again. His position is as plain as a pike staff in his record and especially in his manhandling of the Wickersham report. Mr. Tucker, Washington correspondent, has just written an amazing statement:

"Mr. Hoover himself refuses to be involved in the controversy publicly, but he discusses the subject freely with visitors. Drys leave the White House convinced that Mr. Hoover is a white-ribboner, politically, while wets go out to tell their friends that in reality he is a liberal and open-minded."

We hope Mr. Tucker has been misinformed, for this would indicate that someone is being deliberately deceived, and also a plan to play both ends against the middle as in 1928. Then he was bone dry in dry territory, while his party leaders in New York and in other wet territory went about whispering that he was "all right" and "just watch!"

But the money phase has entered now, and politicians will have to take that into account in their calculations.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 19.—They found out I'm the wrong bird to toss a birthday surprise party. At my age, I'm for celebrating birthdays like a rattlesnake. Add another button and there you are! I was preparing to mop up a Sunday night supper of cold biscuits and pear juice when the surprisers popped in.

Any time they drop in on me they can expect to share a big fat blush. And they took this one standing. I had finished my chore and was window gazing into the beauty of a New York night when the door of my cage suddenly opened and in they rushed, all merry and bright.

There I stood in 1902 house slippers with three manholes for corns, seat-sprung pajamas, hair like last year's bird nest and face spotted up like a hen house window. For no reason whatever, I took on one of those set mechanical smiles I couldn't get off all evening.

Twice I sneaked off to the bathroom to relax, but the expression had jelled. The idiotic grin would not come off. Now and then I'd rub my hand over my face quickly and try to look sour. No use. The Cheshire cat effect was there to stay. I just kept smiling through.

So here they are and they can entertain themselves. They couldn't think up a basket party. Not this bunch. Not only spoil my evening, but I must feed them. Hungry little mouths to feed! Well, how would you like some of our mildewed dog biscuits? Or patie de fois gras that went limburger?

So you are expecting fancy things to drink? Cocktails, vintage Chablis and rare brandy. Then kick a few holes in the piano, sear cigarette scars in the carpet and shake down a few pictures. Well, get a load of this—you'll drink hydrant water and perfectly adore it.

The ladies would collect in the bedroom so I can't go in and slip on presentable clothes. And they'll have their big laugh over the discarded sock I left on the dressing table. To say nothing of the whatyoucallems spread over the back of the chair.

I know this crowd. If I went in there, they'd heap those unmentionables in the middle of the room and play Ring-around-the-Rosie. Just a lot of children. Yeah? Two are grandpappies. And ripe for the ether cone. And one used to take Lincoln to school.

I might know Verne Porter would want to use the telephone. He just thought of a dear old pal in Phoenix. My big surprise party comes the first of the month. Old fiddle face, with an arm up to the elbow in my box of candy, wants to know if I have gasoline for his lighter. He just ran out. Of gasoline, I mean. He'll be with us all evening, don't worry. He'll be wanting me to skip to the corner for his early edition about midnight. And Howard Acton may as well quit fingering that crystal ash tray on furtively. That's the way I got it.

Look! Frank Mason's cousin from Amityville wonders if anyone has seen the disappearing gold fish trick and he's using the Rookwood vase and my fish for props. I wonder if he knows I'm all tuned up to show my 18-karat bawling out trick with the kick in the pants finale if anything happens to that vase. Bob Garland has a gleam in his eye. He'll be chording on the piano soon. If Bill Hamilton starts singing the pogrom is under way. When I want a quartet I'll hire one. And they'll come up the back way. The lady with Harry Silvey feels an audition coming on, too. She's off in a corner mi, mi, mi, mi-ing. Keep on and I'll yell a little opera myself.

What's ailing the sad-eyed Apollo in the gates-ajar collar? He's all to himself admiring his nails. A bit sulky. I'll talk to him. We'll have no moods at this party. He doesn't feel well. For his memoirs: "On my visit to The Great McIntyre I found myself suffering from a touch of the vapours." Let him have his dizzy spell, that's the only way he'll get dizzy this evening.

* * *

They're in a huddle now trying to think up a new game. Henry Bell knows one he picked up in Bermuda. All he needs is a soup tureen. He might as well ask for a live peacock. There's a lull. The party's going haywire. Ah, hoofbeats in the offing. Clippity-clap, clippity-clap! Everything is simply dandy. The party is saved. Bob Brinkerhoff is going to recite.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Every living thing wants to get ahead. That is a fundamental law of all life. It is as true of a louse or a lily as it is of a man. It is the natural law of growth.

When that law operates in man, it speeds up. Success means more to a man than it does to a louse or a lily. It implies not only getting ahead in his own growth, but also GETTING AHEAD OF THE OTHER FELLOW.

YET EVERY MAN FEELS INFERIOR TO SOME DEGREE.

That, too, is natural and fundamental. Inferiority is simply dissatisfaction with your status quo—healthy discontent. An inferiority complex is not necessarily an evil thing. It may be a good and necessary thing. It is only when the sense of inferiority cripples and distorts life that it becomes evil.

Every man wants to be superior, yet feels inferior. So life becomes a constant contest between that desire for superiority and that sense of inferiority; and in that contest a man is at war with himself and with the whole world.

And every human act, however great or trivial, healthy or distorted, is a gesture toward superiority.

Lying is a gesture toward superiority. Boasting, bullying, whining, complaining, smiling, frowning, giving aid, obeying laws, murdering, stealing, working hard, bumming—every act, every attitude, is a gesture toward superiority.

You don't believe it? How, you ask, can murder be a "gesture toward superiority?"

The murderer wishes to prove himself superior to the man he kills, or, perhaps, to all men. He may be avenging himself for a thousand real or fancied wrongs in that one murder; or, as in the case of the vicious young gangster, he may wish to "show his power"—to obtain recognition by killing, since he can obtain it in no other way.

People do stranger things than murder in an effort to prove their superiority and ease their lurking sense of inferiority.

A baby's howl, a girl's pout, a young man's smirk, a spinster's sniff, a matron's snuffle, a politician's snort, a killer's snarl; they all have one root—A DESIRE FOR SUPERIORITY.

You cannot understand yourself or any other person until you realize that one basic fact; but when you do realize it, and when you begin to study and trace each act to its source, your whole life will be changed.

You will know what people are all about, and what you, yourself, are all about. You will feel very near to people; feel that you are literally "all of a piece" with every other person.

And you will know the secret of managing people.

You have tried to make people behave by punishing them, but it hasn't worked. Yet, when you flattered them, they would often do as you asked. And when you really believed in them, as well as flattered them, miracles happened.

Why is that? Why will people do so much more for FAITH than they will for FEAR?

Because when you have faith in a man you are working with that man. You are helping him in his constant, desperate struggle to attain superiority.

And when you punish a man you work against him. You make him feel cheaper and more discouraged, and he already feels cheap and discouraged enough.

Every human being wants to be superior. Help him, and he'll help you. Punish him, and he'll punish you.

Text For Today

Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.—I, Peter, i:3, 4.
